How to Cure Anarchy

PROF. MICHELSON says "Man's greatest work, no matter in what field, is accomplished between the ages of 25 and 45. This has been true in my own case."

Man's "greatest work" in science should BEGIN at 45. It will begin later than that when men become really civilized and educated.

For great work a man needs experience and education. The first 45 years are not too long for a real education.

A boy of 17, calling himself a Communist, appeared before Magistrate Sabbatino, who said to him, "What you need is for me to have you in a two by four room. What I would do to you: I'd blacken your eyes and give you some real American spirit."

That you will admit is a perfect plan for discouraging the spirit of anarchy, which disregards established law and legal procedure.

This is shocking news, but we should read it having in mind the great number of clergymen's wives and chicken farmers that stay faithfully at home, leading monotonous lives, with little thanks to the clergymen's wives, from congregations, and often few eggs for the chicken farmer from his hens.

Faithfulness is the rule, and is never advertised.

The United States Lawn Tennis Association has drawn the line barring negroes from all championship tennis matches.

It says: "This is no reflection upon the colored race." It is PRECISELY a reflection upon the colored race, and that being the case, why not say so?

White tennis players may bar black players and vice versa. No need to be hypocritical.

Important to railroads and their stockholders.

On the financial horizon that is a cloud about the size of dividend that ought to make railroads thoughtful. Airplanes will soon go from the Atlantic to the Pacific between sunrise and sunset, for one-quarter today's railroad charges.

As sad a sight as you ever saw was Wall Street's Christmas tree the day after Christmas.

Many former possessors of paper profits must have looked at that tree, in front of the Exchange, with some bitterness. It had on it only two or three little dull red bulbs. Soaked with rain, partly withered, it was an appropriate tree for those that hung up their stockings in Wall Street, and on Christmas Day couldn't find even the stocking.

This crime wave, dangerous for law-abiding citizens, is dangerous, occasionally, for the criminals also.

Miss Ruth Orloski, 18, very blonde, tells police she ran from her criminal companions in Jersey after they held up stores and killed one man. She ran because "they planned to take her for a ride."

"They had me marked," says the young lady. "But they couldn't get me into an automobile."

This modern person, under $25,000 bail, hoped her former companion and sweetheart "will burn for that murder in New Jersey," for, says she, he is "only a rat." Her word "burn" refers not to his conscience, but to the electric chair.

Beginning January 1, China proposes to manage all China, abolishing "extra territorial" rights of western nations, that have had their own especially guarded residence district and their own courts in China.

Now Americans, British, etc., will have to live in China as Chinese live in America and Britain. It is an interesting experiment, and perhaps premature.

The British know positively that war doesn't pay. They face a "slump year" in industry. Losses in stocks, heavy taxation, labor in power are some things that worry Britishers that were rich and now feel poor.

Across the channel in France, on the other hand, everything is booming, nobody idle, and the French are persistently drawing on Britain supply of gold.

No Liquor Charges to Be Nol Prossed; Hoover Plans for Big Dry Unit

Washington, Dec. 28—Federal district attorneys have been instructed to comply with an order of 1922 which required that department permission must be asked before any cases, including prohibition prosecutions, are nolle prossed.

The move was looked upon as the Government's latest step in its announced intention to tighten up enforcement of the dry laws.

The instructions to the district attorneys, sent in the form of a letter, pointed out that all applications for permission to nolle prosse prohibition cases must be accompanied by the views of the representative of the prohibition department attached to the district attorney's office making the application.

18 YOUNGQUEIST PLAN.

While the letter to district attorneys warning them against dismissal of cases without permission from the Department of Justice went out over the name of Attorney-General Mitchell, it was said at the department today that the document had originated in the prohibition enforcement section of the department.

G. A. Youngquist, assistant attorney-general in charge of prohibition enforcement, was said to have asked the attorney-general to take action, after looking over the records of recent and pending prosecutions.

It was further said at the department that the order would relate to all forms of criminal procedure though it was conceded that prosecutions in enforcement of the Volstead act were the most numerous to come under its provisions.

HOOVER FOR BIG UNIT.

FRANCE PERILS BIG 5 PACT

Washington, Dec. 28 (INS)—High hopes that had been entertained here of a successful five-power naval agreement [illegible] reached at the L[illegible] next month were [illegible] today.

Close examination of the note which France has sent to all the conference powers has disclosed that she has raised so many controversial points that it is wellnigh hopeless to expect the London conference to duplicate the success of the original Washington conference of eight years ago.

To say that President Hoover and Secretary of State Stimson are disappointed is putting it very mildly.

France has, in effect, served notice on the powers that (1) she will consider any decisions arrived at in London as merely supplementary to and reviewable by the League of Nations, (2) that she will not enter any binding agreements

SOMERVILLE VICTIM ONE OF THREE IN PERIL

Sister Leaps to Safety; Cousin Injured; Driver Is Held in Death Charge

One young woman was killed, another sustained painful injuries and a third escaped by a leap for life, when an automobile crashed into a family group in City sq., Charlestown, today.

Mrs. Annie Anderson, 41 Joy st., Somerville, mother of a two-year-old boy, was pronounced dead immediately after arrival at Haymarket relief hospital.

Her cousin, Mrs. Agnes Sullivan, 46 Tufts st., Charlestown, was taken to the same hospital with contusions and abrasions.

Miss Margaret Duggan, 38 Tufts st., Charlestown, sister of Mrs. Sullivan, escaped without injury.

The operator of the automobile, Frank Bailey of Allston, was held in $1000 on a technical charge of manslaughter.

According to Miss Duggan, the three girls were crossing the square to the Elevated station when the machine bore down on them.

Miss Duggan saw it coming and leaped to safety, but the other girls were felled by the machine, the wheels passing over Mrs. Anderson.

In Charlestown court later Bailey was arraigned on charges of manslaughter and operating so as to endanger the lives and safety of the public.

He pleaded not guilty to both charges and the case was continued to Jan. 3 for trial. Bail was fixed at $2000 on the manslaughter charge and Bailey was released on his personal recognizance on the other.

Bailey told police that on seeing the women he applied the brakes but that his car skidded, and struck the group.

Lamont Says Business Safe From Stock Drops

Washington, Dec. 28 (AP)—An apparent lack of unfavorable reaction by general business to the stock market break was viewed today with satisfaction by Secretary Lamont.

After a call on President Hoover the Commerce Department head said that in his opinion the country had passed the point where a sharp break in New York stock prices could wreck general business.

One of the important factors in the maintenance of the high level of general business, he said, was that consumption apparently had been keeping up with production since 1922, except in the case of the automobile and tire industries.

He asserted rapid transportation had brought about a state where orders were delivered promptly, a fact which had resulted in no branch of industry apparently had tremendous stock on hand as has been the case in the depression of 1921.

FRENCH NOTE TO U. S. WRECKS HOPES FOR BIG 5 NAVAL ACCORD

Japan and Britain May Join America in a Triple-Power Treaty of naval tonnage unless such agreements are also accompanied by political agreements covering sea rights in time of war, and (3) that there must be a security pact covering the Mediterranean.

Any one of them singly is capable of upsetting the conference, collectively they form a barrier to its success, in the broadest sense, that officials here could not see today how to overcome.

What President Hoover and Premier Ramsay MacDonald had hoped for was a conference devoted exclusively to the matter of reducing naval tonnage to the utmost limits possible to the end that naval competition might be summarily shut off, and each country eased of its financial burden in naval building. The controversial political questions bound up in such issues as the freedom of the seas, guarantees of political security and reduction of air and land armaments could be left for later and more leisurely negotiation.

But that does not apparently suit the French, and if they stick to their position there is going to be plenty of embarrassment at London for all concerned.

There remains, of course, the alternatives of a three-power agreement, including Great Britain, the United States and Japan, or a four-power agreement with the addition of Italy. With France Italian vagaries what they are, however, there is felt to be scant prospect of getting Italy into any agreement which is not also binding upon France.

A three-power naval armament agreement between England, Japan and the United States was recommended today by Chairman Britten of the House Naval Affairs committee in commenting on the French memorandum to the London conference. Britten added that the French attitude as shown in the memorandum would not result in a breakdown of the conference.

BRITAIN WON'T BE BEATEN.

Even a three-power agreement taking in Great Britain, the United States and Japan would have to have a sting attached to in the form of a proviso that if either of the outside powers began building it would automatically permit the big three to increase their establishments proportionately.

It is a cardinal principle of the British naval policy that the British navy must always be equal to any combination of navies that Europe might conceivably set against it. So much so here that Britain would be prepared to sacrifice this traditional policy and permit France and Italy to build to a size of those of the next powers, etc.

Officials professed to see some ray of hope in the fact that Premier MacDonald has invited Premier Briand of France to visit London, in advance of the official date for a private conference. Perhaps, they think, the two men may be able to work out some thing. But they are not optimistic over the chances. The Tardieu government is essentially national in spirit and purpose.

France's demand for a guaranty of security strikes at the very heart of Europe and in the Treaty of Versailles and in Article 16 of the League of Nations. The Senate was adamant in those parties against the United States guaranteeing the security of any nation, and this policy has grown more firmly entrenched with the passing of the years.

Edge Gives Luncheon to Discuss Naval Parley

Paris, Dec. 28 (AP)—Ambassador Edge gave a luncheon at the American embassy today at which Premier Tardieu, Henri Moysell, chief of cabinet; Hugh Gibson, American ambassador to Belgium, and Norman Armour were guests. Questions which will come before the London naval conference were discussed.

At the conclusion of the luncheon it was said the discussion had been most satisfactory although it was entirely general.

It is known that Ambassador Edge is convinced that the most pressing problem facing France and the United States is that of disarmament. In his conversations with Premier Tardieu that question has had precedence.

The ambassador is represented as feeling the French position permits optimism for a real agreement in London.

of the customs forces, prohibition agents and immigration inspectors on the Canadian and Mexican borders into a border patrol unit within the coast guard.

In addition he favors the complete division of rum smuggling and other activities of the coast guard, such as life saving and ship rescue work.

This disclosure, together with other information trickling through official sources to congressional drys, lent weight to the belief that Mr. Hoover has not only given much personal attention to the prohibition situation in the past but will be the actual generalissimo of the federal dry army in the future.

WICKERSHAM TO REPORT

Although in disagreement with the drastic methods proposed by some congressional drys to better enforcement, the President is understood to have some very definite plans in mind in addition to the announced reorganization of the federal enforcement machinery.

President Hoover's commission has prepared its conclusions on administration, reorganization and relief to the courts in regard to certain of the most urgent questions of law enforcement.

A brief statement was issued today from the headquarters of the commission which has been under fire for several days from sensational circles, where a report was demanded forthwith.

"The chairman of the National Commission on Law Observance and Enforcement stated to the press today that the commission had had ready for some time past certain material and its conclusions respecting administration, reorganization and relief to the courts in regard to certain of the most urgent questions of law enforcement which may be useful to the joint committee proposed to be created by Congress to consider legislation to strengthen law enforcement," the statement said.

The Treasury's announced plan of seeking an agreement with Canada to limit ports of entry on the border, however, took congressional drys by surprise. Hudson said the plan had advantages, if it could be worked out without arousing too strong protests from farmers and others who cross and recross the border frequently.

PROHIBITION INEFFECTIVE

Representative Schafer (R.), Wisconsin, a wet, entered the controversy by asserting that drunkenness is increasing in the States of the "Four Horsemen" of prohibition—Senators Borah, (R.), Idaho; Norris (R.), Nebraska; Harris (D.), Georgia, and Sheppard (D.), Texas.

"Under federal prohibition, drunks and drunken autoists have greatly increased even in the little city of Boise, Ind.," he said. "In 1918, there were 142 drunks arrested; in 1928 there were 262. In 1918 there were no drunken drivers arrested; in 1928 there were 32.

"In San Antonio, Tex., in 1928, there were 2,000 drunks arrested, no statistics for 1919 being available for comparison.

"The chief of police of Atlanta, in his annual report for 1928, stated that 'drunkenness and bootlegging cases are increasing by leaps and bounds.'"

Rival Bootleg Rings War in Lake Region

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 28 (AP)—Rival Detroit and Buffalo liquor running gangs were declared by federal agents today to be engaged in a war to death for control of the Ontario liquor outpost.

C. M. Cramer, special investigator of the Treasury Department, has been assigned here to investigate the situation which already has resulted in the murder of one Detroit liquor smuggler and the mysterious disappearance of three others.

The liquor war started with the descent upon the Ontario ports of Bridgeburg, Port Colborne and St. Pale of a gang of Detroit gangsters who promptly proceeded with offers of higher wages to lure away some of the Buffalo gangs best hired traffickers.

Yellowley Plans Dry New Year for Chicago

Chicago, Dec. 28 (AP)—E. C. Yellowley, prohibition administrator, will use his entire force—men and women stenographers and undercover agents—in an attempt to mop up any wetness that may seep into Chicago's welcoming of the New Year.

This force will be spread throughout the city's cabarets, night clubs and hotels wherever any celebrating is in progress.

Finds Federal Courts Hopelessly Congested

Washington, Dec. 28—President Hoover's law enforcement commission has completed a report declaring that prohibition and some other laws can not be enforced with the courts and laws constituted as at present, it has been learned.

The commission will report that the courts are almost hopelessly congested, that more judges and attorneys are essential and that the dry laws should be properly codified, or interpreted.

The report has been completed and is ready for submission, it was learned, but it has been withheld because of the failure of Congress to appoint a joint commission to act with the President's special commission and outline a definite plan which may be submitted for enactment into the necessary laws and regulations.

BOY RED ROBBED OF CHANCE FOR MARTYRDOM

Judge Refuses to Jail Him and Sends Him Home to His Mother

New York, Dec. 28 (AP)—David Weiss, 17, bespectacled high school student, was in court for begging in the subway in behalf of Gastonia strikers. He identified himself as a member of the Junior Communist League and started a speech on Communism.

Magistrate Sabbatino said he would like to please the lad's eyes, then suggested that his mother buy a cat o' nine tails, then ordered him out of the courtroom lest a martyr be made of him.

David, with his sister, Miriam, a 15-year-old high school girl, were at home with their parents today after spending three days and nights in jail.

Arrested a week ago for soliciting in a subway train they were released by the desk sergeant in a Brooklyn police station and instructed to appear before Magistrate Sylvester Sabbatino in Flatbush police court Tuesday.

KEPT IN JAIL.

They pleaded guilty and, when Magistrate Sabbatino learned the boy was a member of the Young People's Communist League, he remanded both to the Raymond st. jail. Pending investigation of the possibility of deporting them, Miriam was sent to jail with her brother, although regulations forbid the incarceration there of girls under 16 years. No bail was permitted them and their mother was not allowed by jail authorities to visit them.

The children were taken before Magistrate Sabbatino again yesterday, after immigration officials had declined to take up the case.

Addressing the boy the magistrate said:

NO CHANCE FOR MARTYRS.

"What you need is for me to have you in a two-by-four room. What I wouldn't do to you. I'd blacken your eyes and give you some real American spirit.

"We spend billions in this country for schools and what have we here? A mongrel and a moron who tries to go out and defy the American people.

"It is too bad that this government has so much red tape that it makes it hard to get rid of people like you.

"The sentence I am going to give you is not the one I had in mind. I am not going to sentence you to jail. That would make a martyr of you. Get out of this country. You are not fit to be in it."

He then remanded Miriam to the Children's Society, by which she was immediately turned over to her mother.

A Newton woman and a Dorchester woman, first and second wives, respectively, of Col. William B. Cowin, U. S. A., are expected to battle in court for the $500,000 estate willed to his divorced mate by the army officer.

The prospective contestants are Mrs. Katherine B. Cowin, of Prince st., West Newton, and Mrs. Marion Noble Cowin, of Monadnock st., Dorchester.

Under the terms of Cowin's will, filed at Omaha, Neb., following his death at New Orleans, the former Marion Noble, who was a telephone operator at South Boston Army Base, receives only $3000 while the remainder of the estate is left to the woman who divorced him eight years ago and the three children of whom she was given custody at that time.

A short time officer then took as his bride the Dorchester girl, a phone operator in the Signal Corps.

A short time after the marriage Miss Noble had brought suit for $25,000, alleging breach of promise, against Charles B. Hammell of Dorchester, a Boston wool man and former army lieutenant. The suit was removed from the docket after Hammell had filed a general denial of her claims and a bill of interrogatories.

At the time of his death, Cowin was a commanding officer of the army supply depot at New Orleans and the Dorchester woman was living with him there. His fortune was accumulated years ago in a Mexican mine.

Nebraska friends of Cowin declare that the marriage of the two as a result of an agreement with his first wife at the time of the divorce. The first Mrs. Cowin declares she receives no part of the estate for herself, it being willed to her only as a trustee for the three children who, until now, have not known they were prospective heirs to a large estate.

At the Dorchester home of Cowin's second wife today, it was declared she was still in New Orleans.

MARINE GUIDE ATTACKS N. E. 'LEADERS'

Charges Attitude of Some of 'Best' Firms Detrimental to Port Progress

In a New Year editorial today the Boston Marine Guide, veteran shipping paper, scored "public-spirited" New England firms that "wail about lack of business through the port," charging them with a conservatism that is claimed the real reason for a lagging port.

After extending a greeting to its readers and urging a new start for 1930, the editorial takes up the question of shipping improvements through this harbor.

"New England cannot afford to allow its water shipping facilities to diminish, or be unused through the routing of shipments via other ports," the editorial said.

"We do know that some New England firms, who should be sensitive to the welfare of their own business and of their own transportation facilities, have been sinfully negligent of their duty to their community and indifferent to their own welfare and progress.

"If the port of Boston was to be closed entirely what we wait would arise from some public-spirited New England firms that such action would ruin New England industry. Yet these same 'public-spirited' firms, when offered a new service to or from Boston, withdraw into their ultra-conservative shells, together with their shipments, and practically dare the ship operators to get sufficient business from New England concerns to make their lines a success.

"That is the wrong attitude, and so long as some of our 'best' New England firms assume that 'hold back' attitude, we can look forward to but little real progress.

"With the New Year let all these reluctant New Englanders get on the job, discard their foolish caprices and small-minded tactics; let them develop a broader and more aggressive vision of themselves, of business in general and what the port of Boston really is."

HOOVER SOLVES 'GANN ISSUE'

Washington, Dec. 28 (INS)—For the second time in a few weeks the White House has dodged the Dolly Gann-Alice Longworth social precedence feud by not including them in invitations to state functions.

Invitations were issued for the state dinner in honor of President-elect Ortiz Rubio of Mexico and Senora de Ortiz Rubio containing neither the names of Vice-President Curtis and Mrs. Gann nor Speaker Longworth and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth.

The other occasion when they were left off was the state dinner for the Japanese delegation to the London naval conference, when it spent a few days here. The last occasion on which Mrs. Gann was a dinner guest of the White House was when Premier MacDonald and Miss Ishbel MacDonald were guests of honor. Then the British ambassador gallantly waived his rank and Mrs. Gann, the retiring Minister could have the place of honor at Mrs. Hoover's right and Miss Ishbel was seated "somewhere."

Mrs. Gann was given second place on the left of the President, while Lady Isabella Howard, the chatellaine of the British embassy, was accorded the place on the right. Mrs. Curtis claimed the seat on the left of Mrs. Hoover. The Longworths were not there. Although Usher arrived in time from Cincinnati that night they managed to make it "just too late" to attend.

The fact that the disputing parties were not invited to the Japanese and Ortiz Rubio functions has convinced the socially wise that the White House, anxious not to feed the flames of social discord, has decided to leave the Longworths and the Vice-President and his half-sister off the lists except when it is unavoidable, and then entertain them separately.

A dinner will be given to the Vice-President at which the Longworths will not be invited, and then one to the speaker when Curtis and Mrs. Gann will be left out. These formal functions are scheduled for next months.

STATE OPENS INQUIRY INTO CHAIN CHARITABLE ORGANIZATIONS

CHARGE $100 DAY IS MADE BY AGENTS

One Society Said to Have Collected $3000 in Cape Cod Campaign

A State-wide investigation of chain "charitable" organizations is being conducted by the attorney general's department and revelations are expected that will rock them to their foundations and probably drive them out of Massachusetts.

The inquiry was started by Atty.-Gen. Warner as a result of complaints made by the Boston Chamber of Commerce. Police Commr. Herbert A. Wilson assigned a detective to assist the attorney-general in his investigation.

The probe is the outgrowth of an investigation of the activities of The American Rescue Workers whose headquarters in Philadelphia are presided over by "Gen." Duff.

AGENTS MADE $100 DAY

According to Asst. Atty.-Gen. Louis H. Sawyer, 50 per cent of the money collected for this organization was paid to solicitors who collected it. Some of these solicitors made from $50 to $100 a day, according to Mr. Sawyer.

During his three months' investigation of this and other organizations, Atty. Sawyer declares he learned of one instance where an organization had spent $16 for fruit and food which it sent to a Cape Cod hospital, after which it widely circulated the fact through newspapers in the vicinity of the hospital.

Then, he alleges, solicitors visited the district and on the strength of the contribution of fruit and food to the hospital collected $3000 in a house-to-house canvass.

Another instance was cited by Sawyer where only $1800 was spent for charity from $37,000 collected. He added that many of the "officers" of these organizations allowed themselves salaries as high as $100 a week.

OFFICIAL QUITS POST

The American Rescue Workers, one of the organizations under fire of the attorney-general's office, had New England headquarters in Boston and has worked Springfield, Worcester, Fitchburg, Haverhill and Lawrence.

"Colonel" Albert L. Riddle, New England "commander" of the American Rescue Workers, "resigned" his post after Mr. Sawyer called "Gen." Duff and his assitant, "Col." Jones, to Boston and conferred with them.

Despite this "resignation" Biddle was still called "dear comrade" three months later, according to correspondence unearthed by the attorney-general's office and now in its possession.

"Major" B. Entsminger of Mountville, W. Va. who succeeded "Col." Biddle, closed the New England headquarters last Thursday as a result of a conference with Mr. Sawyer. He told the assistant attorney-general he was going to Philadelphia and recommend the closing of all Massachusetts branches to the "national officers."

'Pekin Man's' Skull Exhibited in China

Peiping, China, Dec. 28 (AP)—The skull of the new "Peking Man" recently discovered by a Chinese geologist working in quarries near Peiping, was shown publicly today for the first time at a special meeting of the Geological Survey of China.

The skull, scientists here say, is the most complete find of its kind in history and they point to the fact the entire brain case is intact, which is not the case in the Piltdown man and other Near-dawn men discoveries.

Prof. Amadeus William Grabau, chief paleontologist of the Chinese Geological Survey, has expressed belief that the skull is the nearest approach to the so-called missing link that has yet been unearthed, while Roy Chapman Andrews, noted explorer, has expressed the opinion the discovery is the most important in the whole of human evolution.

Scientists here estimate that the skull is more than 1,000,000 years old. This conclusion is drawn from the geological surroundings in which the skull was unearthed. The skull is in a splendid state of preservation and, as shown today, was still imbedded in part of a block of travertine in which it was found.

The skull was brought into the assembly room in the arms of Dr. Davidson Black, formerly of Toronto, who is honorary director of the Cenozoic research laboratory and geological survey here.

Dr. Black gave full credit for the discovery to W. C. Pai, youthful Chinese member of the geological survey, who unearthed the skull on December 2 on the last day of the season's work.

Dr. Black called particular attention to the vault of the skull form, its massive bow ridges to the occiput and the whole right side of the skull supported when found in a relatively soft matrix which has since been removed.

SOVIET BARS PROPAGANDA

London, Dec. 28 (AP)—Soviet Russia, in resuming its diplomatic and trade relationship with Great Britain, has agreed to abstain from propaganda both in Great Britain proper and in the dominions.

The Russian ambassador's note, after confirming the propaganda article in the treaty of 1924, says the Russian government "has considered that undertaking as extending to the British dominions, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa, and to the Irish Free State, and Newfoundland."

PANTAGES WILL APPEAL RULING

Los Angeles, Dec. 28 (AP)—Alexander Pantages, multi-millionaire vaudeville magnate, today decided to ask the appellate court for temporary freedom as a result of defeat in his fight in superior court to win liberty under bond pending decision upon his appeal from conviction on a charge of attacking Eunice Pringle, dancer.

After a hearing in which Pantages' physical and mental condition was described by several physicians as not necessarily dangerous, Superior Judge George Fricke denied a motion to admit the wealthy showman to bail.

Pantages, who is in jail here pending decision of his appeal from the conviction and penitentiary sentence to one to fifty years, has been ill several weeks.

Judge Fricke said he believed Pantages was suffering more from "prison psychosis" than from any pathological cause.

In his ruling, however, Judge Fricke decreed that Pantages may be removed to the General Hospital, or, if it is preferred, may remain in the county jail hospital and there be attended by his own physicians and nurses. Since suffering a heart attack several days ago, the theater man has been confined in the county jail hospital.

WOMAN FELLED WITH AXE BY FARMHAND

Mother of Five Children Is Believed to Be Dying in Worcester Hospital

Worcester, Dec. 28—Enraged when he was ordered off Deerhill Farm in Sutton, Albert Zydema, 33, a farmhand, today felled his employer's wife, Mrs. Jennie Boris, 33, with an axe.

Zydema was disarmed by the woman's brother, Louis Steffo, and locked up in Worcester jail charged with assault with intent to kill.

His victim, who is the mother of five children was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital with a fractured skull and several cuts on the head, and is believed to be dying.

According to his police, Zydema, who has a wife and son living in West Sutton, had trouble with Louis Boris, owner of Deerhill farm, over wages.

Employed as a farmhand for the past eight months, he was receiving $75 a month and Boris wished to cut the amount of remuneration down to $50.

The two men had words and Zydema announced he would leave on January 1.

This morning Mrs. Boris and Zydema become involved in an argument in the woodshed and the woman ordered the farmhand to leave the place.

Instead he seized an axe and struck her on the head, knocking her unconscious. Steffo appeared in answer to his sister's screams as Zydema swung the axe, and disarmed him. He then tied up Zydema and notified the authorities.

GUNN TO GIVE NEW CELTIC LECTURES

M. I. T. Professor Will Offer Series of Eight at Back Bay Art School

A new series of lectures on Celtic literature by Prof. Sidney Gunn will open at the School of Art, Newbury and Exeter sts., January 7, in response to a large demand that followed completion of the first course under auspices of the State University Extension program.

It was Prof. Gunn, author of several works on Celtic and general literature and a member of the faculty at M. I. T., Brown and the U. S. Naval Academy, who first aroused a widespread interest by exploding the "Anglo-Saxon" myth at a series of eight lectures in the course.

The series was the first time the subject has been popularly treated in Boston, and it drew, in addition to regular students, a large number of professional men and women.

Nearly everyone has some trace of Celtic blood in him or herself, Prof. Gunn points out, and every civilized person is the intellectual descendant of the Celts, for their contributions to human progress have been most important. Iron was first widely utilized by the Celtic people, he declares.

Sports are also of Anglo-Saxon origin, as is the code of fair play, Prof. Gunn sets forth.

Ireland is a treasury of literature revealing ancient Celtic civilization. This literature will be discussed by Prof. Gunn in his new series of eight lectures.

SAYS LEPER CAN WED SAFELY

Paris, Dec. 28 (INS)—A leper can wed without fear of infecting his mate, according to Miss Adela Cohen, of Newark, N. J., who has been engaged in research work at the Pasteur Institute for 18 months.

"In the United States particularly one encounters the mistaken belief that a leper must live in exile," she said.

"Separate linen, individual eating utensils, fresh air and care at home are now advocated by European specialists.

"It takes from five to 60 years for leprosy to incubate so some persons may go through life with the disease without knowing they are infected.

"It is practically impossible to distinguish the germ of tuberculosis from leperous bacilli. Sometimes it is necessary to inoculate a guinea pig in order to ascertain which germ is under the microscope. Tuberculosis kills the guinea pig but he survives leprosy."

FIND EUROPE IS FLOODING U. S. WITH DRUGS

Washington, Dec. 28 (INS)—Europe, despite the public pronouncements of the League of Nations is flooding the United States with an increasing flow of dope, a report of the federal narcotics unit has revealed.

The report, covering only the six months' period between July and December, 1928, was prepared for the league's opium advisory committee meeting in Geneva next month.

As in previous official statements the report disclosed that smuggling narcotics, chiefly from Europe where drugs are said to be readily purchasable by dopefiends, is the gravest problem confronting the United States in enforcing the anti-drug laws.

INCREASE IN SMUGGLING.

Seizures of smuggled drugs showed a startling increase, being nearly three times as high for the six months' period as for the entire year previously. Until Europe, where millions are made in the drug business, stops the flow of illicit narcotics, the United States is practically powerless to bring the dope traffic under control, it was said.

From an examination of the seizures, the report disclosed that France appears to be the chief source of smuggled dope. Many of the shipments, including the 1450-ounce seizure of morphine on the French liner Rochambeau last December, bore labels and markings purporting to be of the Societe Industrielle de Chimie Organique, Societe Geneviese (Eure), France. In the Rochambeau case the French export permit was not issued until 12 days after the vessel left Le Havre for New York with the contraband aboard.

NO AMERICAN LABELS.

None of the seizures bore labels of American drug factories.

While more optimistic so far as the internal drug situation is concerned, the report showed that the legal per capita consumption of drugs in the United States is still in excess of the maximum set by the health committee of the league as required for the medical needs of any country.

The report still adheres to the view either there are less than 100,000 drug addicts in the United States, or a much smaller figure, the smuggling of drugs is on the increase.

Need for greater vigilance by American steamship companies to keep opium off their vessels was stressed by the report.

Bridgeport, Ct., Dec. 28 (AP)—An injunction was issued today in superior court restraining Mrs. Katherine King Fogarty of Fort Worth, Tex., heiress from bringing a breach of promise suit against James J. (Gene) Tunney, retired heavyweight boxing champion.

TRUE CONFESSION STORY

My boy friend hasn't money,
He's quite the nicest man I know;
We never go to swank cafes,
To tea dansants or matinees—
He never buys me flowers rare,
We walk, and thus save taxi fare,
He's just the average, honest kind
With healthy soul and average mind—
But do you think I'll turn him down
For some rich, idle play-boy clown?
Don't make me laugh! Don't be a sil!
I'll tell the cock-eyed world 10 will!

138 PLANES FLY AROUND BOSTON SURVEY SHOWS

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

A survey of the two commercial airports around Boston, Dennison Airport in Atlantic and Mulier Field at Revere, and the Squantum Naval Air Base, where both land and seaplanes are used, reveals the astonishing fact that there are 43 planes flying from all three places.

Twenty six of these ships are commercial airplanes, 15 of which privately owned. The rest, 17, are both land and hydroplanes used at Squantum.

There are 95 planes Army National Guard, commercial and private, at the Boston Airport. And this to the above 43, and we have the grand aggregate of 138 airplanes flying most every day around Boston, or within a five-minute airplane ride.

Hopping down across Quincy Bay, we find Dennison Airport laid out on the marshes of Atlantic, and taking care of the Dennison Airport Corp., Dennison Flying Club, Dennison State Flying Club, and a dozen privately owned airplanes, to say nothing about a couple of ground schools holding classes several times a week. Truly a busy place.

16 AT DENNISON

Hal Martin, operations manager for the outfit, and the man responsible for all the press releases, told us that there were exactly 16 planes using the airport down there, and that 12 of them are owned by individuals, who fly for the fun of it.

Martin asserted that his company's ships are kept busy with student instruction, aerial photography and cross-country work with plenty of local joy hops thrown in for good measure.

Enumerating the planes, Martin counted 12 Wacos. There is one Kitty Hawk, Seimens powered, owned by Doc Ormsby's Dennison Flying Club; a Fairchild cabin monoplane, J-5 powered, owned by the company, and used for cross-country and joy hops; an OX-5 motored Bird biplane, the personal ship of Josh Crane, which is used more for company business than personal flying; and a Travel Air with a J-6 five motor.

MULLER FIELD BUSY

After taking a look around the airport, with its new buildings, we hopped off and a few minutes later landed at Old Colony Airways airport at Muller Field, Revere, where Ed Radasch, vice-president and general-manager of the company greeted us and outlined the ships using his field.

The total number is 10 with three privately owned, and one owned by the Old Colony Flying Club. The rest are company ships numbering three, and three stored by East Coast Aircraft Corp. at their storage hangar at the field.

A Ryan Brougham cabin monoplane and an OX-5 motored Eaglerock complete the company's ships at present, having sold several ships and not having received new ships to take their places.

F. A. McKenzie of Lynn keeps his Eaglerock at the field, as does C. J. Paine of Weston, his Travel Air biplane. Another Travel Air biplane is owned by A. A. Kaufman and R. J. Borland, students at a local college, and residents of Bridgeport, Ill.

Old Colony Flying Club has an Eaglerock biplane, and East Coast Aircraft keeps a Travel Air biplane, and three Travel Airs in storage at the field.

Then we traveled down to the naval air base at Squantum, where we found 17 airplanes, both land and sea types. We were told that there were seven Consolidated NY pontoon jobs; a Vought 02U observation plane; a Vought Corsair, Wasp powered; two Vought VO-5's, one land and the other seaplane; one Vought 1O-1 landplane; two Fledglings; a Consolidated 2-NY-1 landplane and two UO-1 seaplanes or hydroplanes, as all these sea ships are called.

The land ships have been flown from the "back yard" down there, in the rear of the ship hangars, but a new hangar is being finished and an additional area levelled off, so the boys can fly to their hearts' content without a tricky landing to make at the end of each flight.

Most of the land planes are flown over to Boston Airport for landing practice, but the new airport being built will wash that practice out.

Anyone who had the slightest doubt about the amount of flying done around this man's town, can now park their doubts in the ash pan, for there is plenty of flying being done around here, and plenty of airplanes to do it in.

CHICAGO OPERA PUT OFF YEAR

Chicago, Dec. 28 (AP). The curtain will not rise for the world premiere of "Camille," opera by the young Chicago composer, Hamilton Forrest, for another year, the Chicago Civic Opera company announced today.

Production of the new opera had been anticipated as one of the most important events of the opera season. The cast, with Mary Garden on the name role, had been rehearsing for some time with the composer and Maestro Emil Cooper.

It is the desire of the management to give this work by a Chicago composer the finest possible production, the announcement said, "and to assure it the outstanding success which they are confident it will attain. The opera requires a great number of rehearsals, and it is difficult to find time to give the work the necessary preparation and produce it at a date which would permit the number of performances which the work deserves."

Chicken Feathers Land Him in Jail

Salem, N. H., Dec. 28 (AP)—Perhaps it was merely circumstantial evidence, but Henry C. Curtis' attorney was found affluter with chicken feathers and two crates in his cellar were filled with slain chickens. Curtis, whose home is in Lawrence, Mass., was held in $100 for the grand jury, charged will breaking and entering a chicken roost in the night time and larceny of more than 50 of its tenants. William H. Russell of Salem identified the decapitated fowl. Curtis told the court he knew nothing about the matter. He was taken to Portsmouth jail.

JOHN D. HAS HIS PALS AT TREE

A giant evergreen, its lights illuminating the entire first floor of the casements, was filled with gifts. The guests brought tokens with them.

KIP'S DIVORCE FINDS EX-WIFE UNCONCERNED

New Rochelle, N. Y., Dec. 28 (INS)—Alice Jones Rhinelander, divorced by her husband Leonard Kip Rhinelander at Las Vegas, Nev., yesterday, seemed little concerned today over the court's action.

She insisted that the action of her husband would not affect the two suits she has pending against Leonard Rhinelander and his father, Philip. She also asserted that no matter what legal action her husband had taken in Nevada her property rights in New York would not suffer.

Harley A. Harmon, counsel for Rhinelander, was the only one to appear at the brief hearing in Nevada. Rhinelander was present when the decree was granted, but had no comment to make. He later said that he intended to continue his residence in Las Vegas.

The complaint cited that Rhinelander had separated from his wife after she had "by her wiles and artifices taken advantage of his youth and inexperience, and so dominated him that he was induced to leave his family until they became estranged from him, causing him great mental distress and humiliation."

W. D. Cunningham, counsel for Alice, today said he would file an application for service outside of the state of papers in a separation action to be brought against Rhinelander.

Cunningham indicated the separation action would be started Monday. Mrs. Rhinelander in view of the divorce decree which Rhinelander obtained yesterday

CONVICTS WENT MAD IN AUBURN JAIL REVOLT

Los Angeles, Dec. 28 (INS)—A move was begun today to take Joseph Caprico, the 20-year-old Rochester convict, back to Auburn, N. Y., State prison from whence he escaped during the riot and bloodshed of last July 28.

Pacing his cell here after his arrest the youth talked freely of the inside and bloodthirstiness that was his when the rioting convicts made their break for freedom.

"They went wild with excitement when the 1600 browbeaten prisoners found their chance for freedom after being cooped in their narrow cells for months on end," he said.

"Most of us were mad. The releasing of pent-up emotions brought on the riot more than did the realization that freedom was at hand."

Caprico described a fellow convict who went insane beside him at the two men tried to scale the prison wall with their bare hands.

"He ripped out his fingers' nails on the rock. They bled horribly but he felt no pain. He grabbed frantically for my legs when I saw I was getting ahead. I know he would have killed me if he had gotten hold of me."

Caprico was arrested through a fake license on the stolen car to which he made a runaway trip across the continent after the prison break.

The boyish prisoner denied that he took part in the violence, he denies that he wielded a gun in the riot and killed a guard.

Boston Retail Business Is Fair to Public
A shopper in another large city purchased seven baby binders in as many stores, all represented as all-wool. None were all wool; six were wool and cotton (mostly cotton), and one was wool and silk.
The investigation was duplicated in Boston but with entirely different results. A shopper visited eight local stores and asked for all-wool binders. In two stores she was told that they did not carry all-wool binders. In the other six stores "all-wool" binders were sold and chemical analysis showed them to be exactly as represented —all wool.

REVEAL PLANS TO PRODUCE 'SUPER CORN'

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 28 (AP) A promise of "super corn" f agriculture was made befo scientists meeting with the Ame can Society of Agronomy h Henry Wallace, editor of Wallace Farmer, and Dr. H. K. Hayes the University of Minnesota.

"By the new method of inbree ing," Wallace said, "We are give such a mastery over corn that w can control it in almost any dire tion that we think desirable.

"By 1940 we are going to ha corn with a stiffer stalk, height is going to be brought dow to a uniform average of abo three and one-half feet; and may find it worth while to devi a corn with a much strong shank.

NEW BREEDING METHOD

"The newer method of co breeding will be the first gre contribution to the science genetics to practical farming. W shall not have been fully succes ful until we are able to produc as much corn on 40,000,000 acre in the corn belt as we now are pr ducing on 50,000,000 acres."

New strains of destructi wheat rust, made at will in th laboratory, were described b American and Canadian "plan doctors" before the Americ Phytopathological Society, meetin with the American Association fo the Advancement of Science.

NECTAR CAUSES RUST

Margaret Newton, Thorvaldu Johnson, and A. N. Brown, pathol gists in the Dominion rust r search laboratory, Winnipeg, d scribed the production of new rus which look like others, but behav in very distinct manners when in oculated into various plants.

Nectar was mixed from the po tule of one strain of rust on a bar berry leaf with that of anoth strain on another leaf. Many di ferent forms, unlike the parent resulted.

The demonstrated possibility of the sudden development in nature of new forms of the dangerou disease, the pathologists said, makes the eradication of barberry all the more imperative, since if is on the barberry alone that the crossing can occur in nature.

RAISE FUND TO BURY FAMOUS NORA BAYES

London, Dec. 28—That the starting of a fund to give Nora Bayes a last resting place" was done "just to shame Nora's American friends" is the opinion of Hannen Swaffer, dramatic critic of the Daily Express.

London is alarmed at the present moment over what is still in some circles considered a boax—a campaign among theatregoers for money with which "to bury" Nora Bayes. Miss Bayes, well known vaudeville artist, died in March, 1928, and her remains were placed in a vault in Woodlawn Cemetery, New York, March 24 last year, according to advices from New York.

That the fund is not a hoax, however, seems to be upheld by the fact that C. Foster Macnee, owner of the Palladium, London's largest variety house, has signed the appeal for funds to conduct the funeral arrangements "in a proper and fitting manner."

The former Edith Gould, now the wife of Albert Decourville, is the principal subscriber to the mysterious fund started here. The appeal was circulated among Miss Bayes' London friends and also appeared in the London Theatrical Journal, The Era.

It was stated that while Nora was working here, she borrowed $2,000 from Charles Gulliver, then owner of the Palladium.

In return, she is said to have given Gulliver a mortgage on her earnings. When Gulliver heard of her death, he offered to relinquish his claim on her estate, provided the money was given to Miss Bayes' adopted child.

Relatives of the vaudeville artiste stepped in, however, it is reported, and claimed the estate, whereupon Gulliver filed an attachment preventing the granting of a probate until his claim was filed.

KILLS 3 IN RAGE, THEN MARRIES WITH SMILE

Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. 28—Theodore Harris, 23, negro houseman, has confessed to killing Dr. Barclay J. Jones, wife and the latter's nephew on Christmas Eve. The slayings were committed a short time before Harris was married. When arrested Harris denied all knowledge of the three deaths, but the evidence of the doctor's overcoat and a watch which were found in possession of Harris' bride proved too much for the slayer, who shouted: "I killed them because I was mad."

The negro told police that he and the boy, George Lane, Jr., 13, were playing in the cellar about o'clock the day before Christmas, making toy airplanes, and that the boy became abusive.

He cursed me and called me a negro," Harris said, "and I got mad. The boy was kneeling on the floor, holding an airplane, and I picked up a pipe and hit him over the head, then finished him off with an axe."

After killing the boy, Harris told officers he went upstairs where Mrs. Jones was dressing and entered her room.

"She ran for the phone," the negro said, "and I knocked it down and dragged her to the cellar and hit her with the axe."

"I decided I might as well kill the doctor, too," the negro said, and told of hiding in the garage for about an hour until Dr. Jones arrived.

Harris said as Dr. Jones stepped from his car, "I grabbed him and hugged him and threw him down. I hit him in the face."

After killing the physician, the negro said he came to Knoxville and spent the night at the home of another negro.

The next day, he said, he and the woman he married went to the courthouse, obtained a license and were married. They then returned to the home of her parents, where he was arrested.

Letters From Readers

More Perfect 36's Needed, Writer Says

Editor Boston American:

Once in a coon's age we find some professors getting off something new about what type of person to marry.

Conference Hall of Boston University recently advised the men students of that institution not to marry anything but a perfect 36, because every woman should be healthy and normal.

That is very sensible advice.

Don't you think that the present generation of young women are the most skinny looking objects that you have ever seen? We need more 36's.

That hit the mark, professor.

A Thorn in the Book Censorship Law

Editor Boston American:

I just want some of the space in your paper to let out some of my indignation. In the statutes this state regarding books it says: "manifestly tending to corrupt the morals of youth." I don't know who framed those words but I know he did not size up modern youth. This implies that we are mere saplings, mere simps, that we cannot tell a good book from a bad one.

That part of the statute should be washed out. Who ever penned it did not know youth. It is a reflection upon the intelligence of youth of today. Why don't they get rid of it?

Says Prohibition Is a Good Business

Editor Boston American:

When anything makes money for us in business, we applaud it. We use it and keep using it, while it makes money for us. This is good business, is it not?

Since America came under the influence of prohibition, we possess one-half of the wealth of the world, not noticing Africa and South America, but before this particular influence came we owned three-tenths of the wealth of the world.

Prohibition is a good business. We own more under it than under any other system. This is an answer to T. Y. L. in your letters to editor column.

Says Modern World Discourages Genius

Editor Boston American:

President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University says many good things out of his commonplace. He has been saying lately what he said two years ago, that there is not in the world today any great poet, any great philosopher, or religious teacher.

I think that is saying a great deal that cannot be proven. We have just as good poets, philosophers and religious teachers today as the past can boast of. We give little or no encouragement to poets today, and as for philosophers, we shut the door in their face.

In the past, with very few attractions to compete with the present, they gave more push in the poets; they honored them, paid them better than they do today. Who reads poetry today? We have a few poetry magazines, but they are only for the intelligensia.

As for philosophy, if we have any one who goes into this, someone yells out he's going daffy. We have the talents in this generation, but do we boom poetry or philosophy. We lack as a nation a liking for these gifts.

Dean Franklin Lauded for Work Among Girls

Editor Boston American:

There is no woman in an educational institution who is trying more to get at the heart of problems of young women than Dean Lucy Jenkins Franklin, who has just completed five years as dean of women in Boston University.

She interviews over 30 young women every week, listening to their problems and aiming to solve them in the way that will be helpful to the young woman in after life, away from college.

These talks, personal as they are, have enabled many a girl to iron out the creases in her life and solve the knotted cord that has bound her to some trying habit of indifference or inattention. Of course, there are love streaks sometimes that need to be directed aright so that they may not drown the prospects of a girl in despair.

A MOTHER.

Class Distinction in Law Enforcement

Editor Boston American:

There is one thing that shows up the inconsistency of law enforcement, about prohibition. There was a raid staged lately at a Boston hotel but no arrests made, liquor was seized and smiles only followed. There was a raid against a party of men in the poorer section of this city, some time ago; liquor was seized and everyone present was summoned into court.

This privilege of taking a drop is extended to many who are high up in life, but for those who are numbered among the common people, God help them if they break the Volstead act or any other act. I don't suppose you will print this, but it is the truth. JOHN G. CORCORAN.

Snow Removal May Also Eliminate Ice

Editor Boston American:

I could not help shaking my sides with laughter, when I read in your paper that calcium was being used in New York city streets, to get rid of the snow, as it melts it and makes a clean path for traveling.

This is the same calcium that Dr. Walter Timme of the Neurological Institute of New York asserts will get rid of sin in a person's makeup. He says there is a deficiency of calcium in the blood and this gives an opportunity to sin. Sinners of New York follow the spraying calcium cart and find yourselves becoming saints!

Berlin, Dec. 28 (AP) The Aeronautic Society has issued a statement that the projected North Pole expedition in the dirigible Graf Zeppelin has been called off for 1930, but that it is fully expected the flight will be made in 1931.

On Dec. 23 the Berlin offices of the Zeppelin company announced that the flight had been cancelled. Rats Going to School to Study Geometry

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 28 (AP)—White rats are going to school and becoming skilled in geometry.

Prof. Paul E. Fields of Ohio State University today told psychologists meeting with the American Association for the Advancement of Science now 24 rats, though hundreds of lessons, were able to distinguish between various triangles.

The study, undertaken to determine the nature of sight in the rodents, indicated they rely upon a large, slightly blurred image for perception.

The rats were able to distinguish between certain geometrical figures, different sizes of triangles, triangles placed on their points or flat sides and those placed at varying distances.

$75,000 SUIT IN STOCK DEAL

Plymouth, N. H., Dec. 28 (AP)—Fifty stockholders of the Davison Motorcar Co., Inc., today filed suit in Grafton County Superior Court against Guy Davison, principal officer of the concern, for an aggregate of $75,000, alleging that they bought stock under misrepresentation.

Davison, James Alexander and William Theall, the latter stock salesmen, were indicted recently at Laconia on charges of fraud in the sale of stock in 1924.

Alexander and Theall were arrested at Boston and taken to Laconia, where Alexander pleaded guilty and was sentenced to two years in State prison.

Davison, prominent wholesale and retail automobile distributor and service station owner, has not been placed in custody, but has given notice through attorneys he will plead not guilty.

Cornelius J. Lane of Laconia is chairman of the stockholders' committee which instituted the suit. They allege they bought stock under the belief the assets of Davison Motorcar Co., Inc., covered valuable enterprises operated by Davison, but subsequently found to be apart from the incorporated concern.

Two States to Get No Boulder Dam Income

Washington, Dec. 28 (AP)—Atty-Gen. Mitchell held today that the Boulder Dam act does not provide for revenues to the states of Arizona and Nevada for which Secretary Wilbur has made provision.

The Attorney-General set forth that there is no requirement in the act to realize any revenues whatever for the two states in the 50-year amortization period. Secretary Wilbur, however, made provision for such revenues, amounting to about $300,000 annually in each state, when he set his price of 4.5 mills per kilowatt hour for power.

Officer Takes Count From Mesmerist

Chicago, Dec. 28 (AP)—The long count for Gene Tunney at Soldier Field was nothing compared with the one Sergt. Tony Hintz of the Calumet city police station took.

The sergeant had arrested a fellow who turned out to be a mesmerist.

"A mesmerist?" said Sergt. Hintz. "I don't believe it."

"You grieve me," said the prisoner. "There is nothing so provoking to a high class mesmerist as to have people intimate that he trifles with the truth. However, I will gladly demonstrate."

"That's K. O. with me," said the sergeant. "Do your stuff."

The mesmerist's eyes flashed with a strange light. His long fingers wiggled through the air as though weaving rosettes from imaginary spaghetti. He intoned: "Anadaba! Osculoosa! Eeny, meeny, miny mo! Bark!"

The sergeant did so.

"Pretty good," said the sergeant, "but I felt a bark coming on anyway, so that doesn't count. What else do you do?"

"Ah," said the mesmerist, "I will demonstrate my piece de resistance. Close your eyes and count to 1000."

Sergt. Hintz laboriously climbed the numerical scale and finally, with a triumphant shout, sounded "1000."

He opened his eyes. The mesmerist was gone.

NAB R. I. STATE COP IN CHASE

Pawtucket, Dec. 28. A report that Lieut. Harold Siteman, of the Rhode Island State police, driving a car in which two women were passengers, was chased more than a mile through the city early today by Pawtucket patrolmen, was made to Col. St. John Chaffee, head of the State patrol.

The report was prepared by Patrolmen Patrick Walsh and John Weir, who commandeered the car and chased Siteman when he is alleged to have failed to stop on Walsh's signal. The report charges that Siteman sped through the city, passing a red traffic light, for a mile and a half before he was captured.

Those released by Sergt. Harold Howland, no charges being preferred, and the report was made to Chief Charles A. Hall, who admitted its contents and said he had been advised by City Solicitor James G. Connolly, who is also legislative counsel to the governor, to turn the report over to Col. Chaffee. This he said he had done.

AUTO DIVES IN MERRIMACK

Lowell, Dec. 28 (AP)—An enclosed automobile, in which John and James Gannon, brothers, of 2 Bridge st., Billerica, were riding on the Lowell-Lawrence boulevard early this morning, skidded, plunged through a guard rail and down 25 feet into the Merrimack river, landing overturned twice in the descent.

When the Gannons extricated themselves, they miraculously escaped their only loss, aside from the wreckage of the car, had been the dress clothes and dress shirts and collettes in John's left side coat pocket. The machine came to a stop in three inches of water.

Near Settlement on Reparations

LAUDS POSTAL EMPLOYES

Greater Boston postal employes were highly praised by Postmaster Charles H. Gow in a statement in which he reviewed their splendid work during the holiday season.

It was addressed to "My fellow postal workers," and said in part:

"The remarkable achievement recorded by our force in dispersing of the entire accumulation of Christmas mail on the day preceding the holiday is convincing evidence of the spirit of loyal co-operation which exists in our organization and which has been manifested on many previous occasions since I assumed the responsibilities of this office.

"I do not wish to distract one iota from the credit which unquestionably is due our supervisory force for the splendid contribution which they made toward securing such a satisfactory solution of the most earnestly desire, however, to pay a well-merited tribute to the great rank and file of the organization, the clerks, carriers, laborers and motor vehicle service employes, upon whom we were obliged to depend for the final accomplishment. Their work was magnificent and their spirit exceptional.

MR. BABBIT PULLS THE STRINGS

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

THE drama's New Year, like many that have gone before, brings its own surprises and a fair assortment of mixed promises. The surprises, of course, become the main temptations to those who believe in the theater and are willing to read about it. In this particular branch of the 1930 season may we present the indomitable Shubert Freres, whose local activities in the arts are bounded by no less than six ample temples, two of which, for the moment, happen to be tenantless.

• • •

BUT that is not to be accepted as the new season's pleasant surprise—the January astonishment. No, indeed. Other playhouses than those rented by the Shuberts sometimes haul close to the wind for repairs or for other reasons. There is cause for real astonishment, however, and hope for the drama's future, too, in the sublime surrender of the Shuberts to the good old subscription list. The Theater Guild already has made regular seasonal demonstrations in the idea—and has been scolded right merrily by the Elder Statesmen, of which the ambitious Shuberts are charter members. They just couldn't stand for Mr. Babbitt and his efficiency.

Nicholas Young

• • •

IT was not parlor pastime for the Theater Guild to spread out its new doctrine in salesmanship and successfully sell it to cautious buyers. But as chance would have it, the idea was both sound and practical. The Old Guard stormed against it, and was rewarded by the vision of an expanding Guild and yearly profits too substantial to be ignored. Disconsolate days merely followed more disconsolate nightly reports on the sad state of the drama. Only the Guild and its now enormous subscription list appeared to be doing business at the old stand.

• • •

SO NOW, the virtues of the innovation have settled squarely upon the Shubertian scheme of making better business in regions where before it was scant and uncertain. The revival of Victor Herbert's old works as being something worth while to the playgoer pointed the way, and forthwith the Shuberts, original scoffers at the Guild, adopted the hateful, scheme—body, soul and mailing list. If the result has been satisfactory, and we have good reason to believe it has, the credit really belongs to those pioneers that first sensed what was chiefly wrong with the theater and produced the necessary remedy.

• • •

IN THE meantime, the Guild will move into its fifth week at the Hollis with Bernard Shaw's argumentative comedy, "Major Barbara," having first assured itself, with much foresight, of excellent business in face of whatever competition the next year may bring forth.

BACK YARD FOR THE SHOW

Born Theodore Friedman in Circleville, Ohio, he made his debut as an entertainer as a boy in short trousers, with his own back yard as the theater, his audiences the kids of the neighborhood. But their parents did not appreciate Ted's tooting on musical instruments, for many times his father was asked to keep him quiet.

Eventually he joined an act at $20 per week, and he was "on the high road to success." After many adventures he landed on the New York vaudeville stage in an act billed "Lewis and Lewis." Ted had taken his partner's name because his own was too long. His rise was rapid.

Screen Beauty in Person to Teach New Dance

"The Boardwalk" is the new dance Esther Ralston, the "golden girl of the screen," is introducing this week at the Keith-Albee. "The Boardwalk" is said to be Miss Ralston's own creation.

"It has so much swing and so much pep it's loads of fun to do," Miss Ralston said. "Once you get the routine of it, you'll love it. And it's really not hard!"

Miss Ralston, who appears in person, also sings several new hits.

The New Play

HOLLIS—"Major Barbara," a play by Bernard Shaw. Third of the Theater Guild's local presentations. An argumentative narrative, based upon the Shaw theory that poverty is the greatest of crimes; that besides this, all other evils seem slight. Included in the cast are Frieda Inescort, Dudley Ginges, Elliot Cabot, Percy Waram, Jane Wheatley, Phyllis Connard, Edgar Kent and Winnifred Hanley. Staged by Philip Moeller.

BLOCK'S MUSIC PLAYED BY SALMOND

By MOSES SMITH

PLEASANT memories of the "old days" must have filled the grey heads of those who make up the bulk of the audience at the Friday afternoon Symphony concert. For this week's program begins with Mozart's overture to "The Magic Flute," traverses Beethoven's Fourth Symphony, and ends with the many-times-hackneyed war-horse, Tchaikovsky's "1812" overture.

Only the genuine storm and stress, the explosive emotionalism of Bloch's "Schelomo," Hebrew Rhapsody for 'cello and orchestra, contrasted with the "solidity" of the other numbers. This piece is not ultra-modern, in view of the water that has flowed under the bridge since it was written 13 years ago. But as it was heard in stirring performance by the soloist, Felix Salmond, and Mr. Koussevitzky and his men, it is music to stir the listener from his comfortable attitude.

It is an extraordinary composition. Though singularly unmoved by most of Bloch's works heard here, the writer was minded to repeat the eulogies "Schelomo" has called forth. He found there what Bloch has insisted is in his music—an intense Jewish spirit, the spirit of the Old Testament. This spirit is perhaps religious, but of a fierceness which religion has since forgotten. It is a spirit at times of epicurean delight, at other moments of blackest despair.

The music, thoroughly rhapsodic in character, yet unified by a controlling mind of towering strength, was eloquently interpreted by Mr. Salmond.

Much more sincere, it seemed, was its outburst at the end of Tchaikovsky's Overture. True, the performance was exceptionally fine. But the only reason for its inclusion seemed to be Mr. Koussevitzky's guess that his audience was not so sophisticated as it appeared.

The sparkle, the electricity of Mozart's piece were mirrored in the playing. The Symphony was rendered now sensitively, now roughly and sluggishly.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW STILL PEPPY WITH TRENCHANT PEN

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW, whose satiric comedy, "Major Barbara," will be offered by the Theater Guild Acting Company at the Hollis Street for two weeks, beginning Monday, has been growing old quietly. At 72 he is not much different from the firebrand of 50 or 30. His red beard has grown a venerable white and perhaps he is not so ready to be the stormy petrel in an argument as of yore; but these changes are external and superficial.

• • •

SHAW is Shaw today, and it is inconceivable that he will be anything else even when he has reached 90. He has not changed his habits of living. He is still a strict vegetarian and still has a distaste for sport. He still likes eyeing, though he uses also his motor, and public speaking is still his hobby. One might also say that Mrs. Shaw is still the force behind the throne, though only the intimates of the writer know that. As far as the business end of his profession is concerned, Shaw has not changed. He still remains the keenest manager an author can hope to have.

Bernard Shaw

For many years he has been the terror of theatrical managers and he still gets the largest royalty of any playwright, 10 per cent for the first $10,000 taken in at the box office, and above that sum 15 per cent on the gross, which works out to about twice the amount of royalty the general run of dramatists is paid.

Many years ago Shaw enunciated the principle that "the spontaneous recognition of really original work begins with a mere handful of people and propagates itself so slowly that it becomes a commonplace to say that genius, demanding bread, is given a stone after its possessor's death." The remedy for this is "sedulous advertising." He accordingly began to advertise himself so well that, as he admitted at middle life, he was "almost as legendary a person as the Flying Dutchman."

He is still an ardent devotee of advertising, though he no longer goes in for intensive campaigns, but indulges in occasional spreads for goodwill purposes.

Shaw is as reticent about his financial affairs today as he has always been and as careful. He has a large income and must be one of the wealthiest writers living, but no one knows what he does with his money. The rumor is that he devotes much of it to bequests, especially to the socialistic cause. And here is more evidence that Shaw has not changed with the passing years. He became an active Socialist at 20 and has remained firm to his principles since, despite the success he has achieved.

THE POT CALLS THE KETTLE "BLACK"

GOOD old Bob Mott of Chicago, whose theaters gave the late Florence Mills, Ethel Waters, "Hamtree" Harrington and dozens of others, including three outstanding figures in "Hot Chocolates" at the Tremont, "Jazzlips" Richardson, Billy Higgins and Billy Maxey, their first opportunities, used to say that colored actors think the same as white. All of which has more or less to do with colored comedians applying burnt cork.

In "Hot Chocolates" are three negroes who could, if they wished, apply white grease paint to their lips and be as equally grotesque as they are when smeared with cork. But they would no more think of appearing minus a coal black face than meet white comedians would think of "going on" without a makeup.

These comedians are Richardson, Higgins and Maxey. Why don't negroes paint their faces red? Why don't they resort to the comedy makeups of old-time comics? What is the psychology back of this burnt cork business? Simply that the negro is basically a minstrel performer.

Billy Higgins, for instance, is remembered chiefly for his grotesque gestures—negroid in every moment. Billy Maxey depends slightly on exaggerated costumes, shepherd plaids and funny hats. "Jazzlips" Richardson is straight from the jungle and no mistaking it. He dances as only a negro would dance. But some one once said he was a comedian and therefore, for that reason alone, he applies burnt cork to his dusky face. Both Connie and George Immerman, producers of "Hot Chocolates," have tried in vain to "clean" him up. It just can't be done.

Once a negro is branded a comedian he is never without his can of burnt cork. He tries to become blacker, as his sister actresses try to become whiter.

The whole cast will be seen to advantage in the scenes entitled "Pooh Bah" and "The Mechanical Doll." Hrlub's Gayety jazz orchestra will be another feature.

LOVE WINGS ITS WAY TO ICY WASTE

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

NOW that Rear Admiral Richard Byrd is somewhere in Antarctica, interest may be expected to center in whatever filmdom sends along that ties up the drama of life with Polar screen exploit. The initial picture arrives today; it is "The Last Zeppelin," at the Park. It takes some well known Hollywood folk into strange, and icy, places.

SCIENTISTS with the Byrd expedition will not report it as a fact, but you can imagine high temperatures would prevail in the land of perpetual snow and ice, provided flaming love were there. In the photoplay, Cupid hits the South Pole trail; and in his grip he has the hearts of those notable screen lovers, Conway Tearle and Ricardo Cortez, not to speak of the tender passion of the alluring Virginia Valli. The vehicle is a Zeppelin, and the romance is interwoven in the story to add to the thrills and suspense. Mr. Tearle has the role of the Commander, Mr. Cortez the handsome young officer who has a yen for the skipper's wife (Miss Valli). Other figures in this all-talkie are Duke Martin, Kathryn McGuire and Winter Hall.

Virginia Valli

• • •

THERE'S a kick" in the finish; wouldn't be fair to disclose how the picture ends. It's an act of heroism, and Cupid gets his two hearts together. And that's as far as we will go. It comes after the Zeppelin is wrecked in the zone of desolation; privations are encountered, and finally, in response to distress signals, an airplane comes to the rescue.

• • •

MISS VALLI gets her chance to show what she can do in acting and talking. It will be remembered that this girl owed her Hollywood opportunity to a lucky meeting with Bert Lytell. She had ability; and received an offer from a theatrical company about to tour Europe. She had made up her mind to accept. While waiting to "sign up," she happened across Mr. Lytell, an old friend. He persuaded her that her future lay in America—in motion pictures! Later, she met him in Hollywood, and there they appeared together in several productions. She now says she has never regretted giving up a stage career, and that her love now is—films.

• • •

MISS VALLI is one of the Hollywood colony's most ardent sport enthusiasts; she goes in particularly for swimming, tennis and hiking. She has been called the "apostle of good health through exercise."

ENLIST OLDTIMER LOUIS MANN FOR SCREEN SPECIALTIES

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
(Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service, Inc.)

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 28—Louis Mann came out to Hollywood to play in a picture with De Wolfe Hopper, William Collier, Sr., Lew Fields and Joe Weber. He had no idea of remaining here but expected to return to New York as soon as he finished the old-fashioned revue. Harry Rapp thought differently after seeing some of the rushes. Louis Mann, he decided would go great in one of the old-time type of stories in which he played on the stage. Therefore, Mr. Mann was invited to remain and put under a long-term contract.

* * *

He will do "The Father," a play which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer plans to produce. No one seems to have any definite information who wrote "The Father." Whether it's Strindberg's play or not, I have no idea, perhaps it is an original. Anyway, Mr. Mann remains here to enjoy the semi-tropical climate of California and how he and the rest of the old-time actors do love our summer weather at the Christmas season.

Louella O. Parsons

NANCY CARROLL isn't going to have very much time this coming year to sit by the fire and knit. Paramount has so many pictures for her that every time we hear of a new one in preparation we just automatically ask "where is Nancy?" Let's hope Paramount doesn't make the mistake of putting her in too many productions for there are bound to be a few poor ones if they turn them out like factory-made shoes. "Blow the Man Down," a novel by a brother of George Broadhurst, is now being prepared by John Farrow for Miss Carroll's next. Johnny, who has been suffering with a bad cold, is well again and at work.

* * *

TRY to pin down any first-class news these days. Christmas week is as bad for a movie column as Holy Week is for theater news. There just is nothing doing. We did hear that as soon as Joan Crawford finishes "Montana" she is going to begin "The Blushing Bride" story of which we talked so long ago. It is a sequel to "Our Dancing Daughters" and "Our Modern Maidens." Plenty of money is to be made in a picture of this kind for it is what the dear public wants. Jack Gilbert and his wife spent Christmas with the Barney Glazers. Are you surprised that the Barney Glazers had their Christmas dinner together? They are separated, it's true, but Christmas comes but once a year and people usually forget their grievances at a time like this.

* * *

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: Sally Eilers admiring a diamond wrist watch she received for Christmas. Bebe Daniels showing her new town car, given her for Christmas by Ben Lyon. Colleen Moore among those present at the opening of "Diamond Lil." Buster Keaton surveying a tank marked "Merry Christmas" into which he had to jump. Ruth Chatterton working all night to finish her picture and getting wet to the skin in a rescue scene. Nancy Carroll lunching all alone and seeming to enjoy it. Alice White and Sid Bartlett shopping on the avenue. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

STAGE AND SCREEN

NEW PICTURE HAS BEAUTY TUNES, FUN

FROLICKSOME and tuneful is "No, No, Nanette," which had its premiere at the Uptown and Washington St. Olympia yesterday. It's a gay musical comedy, full of life, with plenty of beautiful girls. It is partly in technicolor, too, and makes sparkling entertainment for the holidays. The story deals with a very sophisticated millionaire who imagines he could buy clothes for pretty girls just out of pure good nature and get away with it. The consequences include trips to Holland, Japan, New York and Mars. "Nanette" is mirthful, melodious, and produced with artistry. "King of the Air," the big song number, has a swinging, virile rhythm. It is sung by Alexander Gray, the youthful leading man, in a way that will make it stick to the memory.

Alexander Gray

Other song numbers are "The Japanese Ballet," "The Dance of the Wooden Shoes," "Dancing on Mars" and "Pretending." "I Want to Be Happy" and "Tea for Two," hits of the original stage musical comedy from which First National adapted the screen production, have been kept in the picture, and they sound as well as ever.

Bernice Claire and Gray portray the leading roles very effectively. Miss Claire, a new personality from the stage, playing her first picture, will without doubt be one of the musical talkies' best bets hereafter. She has youth, beauty, and voice. Gray, who was first heard in "Sally," is also a coming star.

The comedy is upheld by the clever Louise Fazenda and Lucien Littlefield, Lilyan Tashman and Bert Roach are also prominent in the fun-making. Other players are Zasu Pitts, Mildred Harris, Henry Stockbridge and Joselyn Lee.

"No, No, Nanette" was directed by Clarence Badger. It must have been a colossal task to direct this big musical show, but Badger has done a noteworthy job.

Pictures--Variety

GLOBE—"Her Private Affair" and "The Virginian" for four days; starting Thursday, "Broadway Scandals" and "They Had to See Paris."

MODERN AND BEACON—"Distrait" and "Live and Laugh" for three days; starting Wednesday, "Song of Love" and "The Sailor's Holiday."

BOWDOIN—"The Locked Door," "The Isle of Lost Ships" and a Harry Langdon comedy, "Skirt Shy." Also vaudeville. Special midnight show on Tuesday.

Glad to Put the Ill in Villain

PERCY WARAM

NEW SHOW AT REAL JACK OF THE HOWARD ALL TRADES

AT the Old Howard Monday the management will put forth another topnotch burlesque card, coupled with high grade vaudeville and pictures. There will be a special midnight show, New Year's Eve. The "Mischief Makers" is the new show. It will introduce Milt Fromkford and Harry Meyers, Marjorie Vay, "Babe" Harris, Lucille Carrol, Mildred Rogers, George Reynolds, Chuck Morrison and a chorus of 18 dancing girls.

Many special comedy numbers will be introduced around the big scene, "A Day at College," is well supplied with humor.

In addition, the vaudeville will present the Six Gallenos, Gaierini and Sister and Krugal and Hamilton.

The pictures will present "Protection," "Auntie's Mistake" and "The Single Man." There will also be the usual midnight show Friday.

Looking Ahead

JANUARY 6—
"Pleasure Bound" at the Shubert.
Fritzi Scheff in "Mlle Modiste" at the Majestic.

JANUARY 13—
Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion" at the Hollis.

EDGAR SELWYN, who is presenting his first musical show, "Strike Up the Band," with Clark and McCullough, at the Shubert, is the outstanding exception of the old adage that a man who is jack of all trades is master of none. Or, taking it the other way round, he offers ample evidence the success in any business or profession demands detailed knowledge and experience in every aspect of that business or profession. For Mr. Selwyn's training has included working in every capacity concerned with the theater. Starting as an usher, he has been actor, playbroker, producer, playwright, stage director, casting director, theater owner and press agent.

Edgar Selwyn

To refer to him now as a producer is merely to apply as simple a title as possible to a man who combines several of the above mentioned jobs in one.

Film Futures

JANUARY 4—
Irene Bordoni in "Paris" at New B. F. Keith's.
"Little Johnny Jones" at Keith-Albee.

Actress Talkie Star in Own Stage Success

Just as Maude Adams was never able to get away from "Peter Pan," once she had created the role, so Charlotte Greenwood, the comedienne, has never been able to disassociate herself from the role of "Letty," in "So Long Letty."

LUCKY SEVEN PUTS JINX TO ROUT

THEATRICAL folks are notoriously superstitious. To park hat upon a bed or to open an umbrella in a house is regarded as almost fatal to good luck, and to walk under a ladder or allow a black cat to cross one's path is equally disastrous.

When a new show is launched ill the signs and omens are consulted. Not a chance is taken that any unlucky thing will work against the show.

So it comes that the producers of "The House of Fear," the thrilling mystery farce playing the Plymouth, was carefully planned to meet all requirements of the little gods of luck. Indeed, Elmer Brown, director, and Cecil Spooner, its star, consider, so far as lucky omens can be counted upon, that "The House of Fear" has everything in its favor. The number seven is prominent among the good omens for the play, for it was the seventh mystery play that opened in Gotham this season, and its opening date at the Republican Theater was on the seventh day of the month.

There are 14 letters—double seven—in the title of the play, and there are seven leading characters in the drama.

Another significant omen for "The House of Fear" is that it came to the Plymouth from the Republic, which house is regarded as a "lucky" stand. It was in the Republic that "Abie's Irish Rose" began its record-breaking run, and many other successes have had their premieres in this theater.

"The House of Fear" will be starting its second week at the Plymouth, Monday evening, with a matinee on New Year's Day and Saturday.

ESTHER RALSTON

YOUTH TO HEAR GOOD MUSIC

ERNEST SCHELLING, pianist, conductor and lecturer, gives the first of a series of four concerts this season. The first will be in Jordan Hall, next Saturday morning. Mr. Schelling will be assisted by a large contingent of players from the Boston Symphony Orchestra. His delightful talks, stereopticon slides and musical barometer help kindle the interest of his young audience. Because of the postponed arrival of the Society of Ancient Instruments, Mr. Schelling proposes to feature the Woodwinds instead of the String Choir at his opening concert. The Society of Ancient Instruments will be the assisting attraction on the program which takes place on January 18.

The following program will be given next Saturday morning: Overture to "The Bartered Bride," Scherzo from "Midsummer Night's Dream," Quartette concertante for oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon, "L'Apprenti Sorcier," "Silent Night, Holy Night," "Berceuse" from "The Fire Bird," Polka and Galop from Second Suite by Stravinsky.

'CANNED' SONG IS TEACHER FOR RUDY

THOSE who aspire to musical heights and haven't the money to study abroad may take heart from the success of Rudy Vallee of Maine. Rudy, whose first all-talking musical photoplay, "The Vagabond Lover," is now playing at the New B. F. Keith's, learned voice by listening to great singers on the phonograph, and acquired his orchestral background through a correspondence school.

Rudy Wiedoft, celebrated musician, was the head of the correspondence school. It is to his influence that Vallee owes both his success and his first name. He was born Hubert Prior Vallee.

Rudy never had time to train his voice—so he used to sit for hours listening to the tones of singing stars reproduced via the phonograph.

Since Rudy graduated from Yale University in 1927, he has become a foremost radio and night club idol. Marshall Neilan directed the film with a supporting cast that includes Sally Blane, Marie Dressler, Nella Walker, Danny O'Shea, Eddie Nugent, Alan Roscoe, Charles Sellon, Malcolm Waite, Norman Peck and the internationally known orchestra, "The Connecticut Yankees."

BOSTONIAN IS STAGE BABY

JED PROUTY, the stuttering booker of "The Broadway Melody," who is at Loew's State the coming week in "It's a Great Life," the Duncan Sisters' first all-talking picture, was born and brought up in the atmosphere of the theater.

Born and educated in Boston, Prouty was one of the youngest children to appear on the stage. At the age of three he was in a show. Before entering pictures he was a star in his own right on Broadway and appeared in such stage hits as "The Pink Lady," "The Only Girl," "Seeing Things," "Girlies," "Katie Did" and others.

Prouty has been in pictures for the past eight years and may be remembered for his work in "He Knew Women," "The Knockout," "The Gold Digger," "Smile, Brother, Smile," "Orchids and Ermine," "No Place to Go," "The Gingham Girl," "The Siren" and "Name the Woman."

New Year's Day Matinee

An extra matinee on New Year's Day has been announced from the Copley for the rollicking farce, "The Middle Watch." This matinee is in addition to the regular Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday afternoon performances, with the curtain at 2:30, while the regular evening performances are scheduled for 8:30.

DINE AND DANCE

WHERE YOU GET GOOD FOOD, MUSIC, VAUDEVILLE AND DANCING

First New Year's Eve Party for The Stella

Not a single detail is being overlooked by the management of The Stella, popular dine and dance restaurant in the heart of the theatrical district, in order to make its first New Year's Eve celebration memorable. Billy Paine, the capable master of ceremonies, assisted by Carl Moore, will offer an attractive program of entertainment and dancing for that evening. Souvenirs, in addition to favors and noise-makers, will be given each patron.

Billy Paine

The Stella has steadily grown in its popularity and bids fair to become the outstanding dine and dance restaurant in Boston.

Expect Big Crowd at Spanish Gables

Truman Carew and His Royal Entertainers will be featured at the big dance New Year's Eve at Spanish Gables, Elliott circle, Revere Beach. Manager Hurley announces dancing until the wee hours of the morning. There is plenty of parking space for automobiles adjoining the Gables and handy train service to and from Boston over the Narrow Gauge.

Truman Carew

At midnight there will be a special entertainment. Manager Hurley expects to have one of the largest parties of the year at this beautiful ballroom.

Atlantic City Band at American House

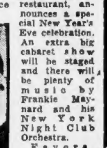
There will be a gay party to usher in the new year at the Rathskellar in the American House. Manager Frank R. Lyons has brought Billy Kerr and his syncopators from Atlantic City to furnish music for the occasion. This well known band has been very popular at the famous resort.

Frank A. Lyons

Favors, noise-makers and souvenirs will be plentiful and Jack Watts, maitre de hotel, identified there for the past 35 years, will be on hand to greet his many friends. At a moderate price per cover Lyons has made plans to feed a record-breaking crowd.

New Show to Usher New Year at Yen Ho

The Yen Ho, 245 Tremont st., Boston's oldest and best known dine and dance restaurant, announces a special New Year's Eve celebration. An extra big cabaret show will be staged and there will be plenty of music by Frankie Maynard and his New York Night Club Orchestra.



Frankie Maynard

Favors, souvenirs and noise makers will be distributed and everything to assist the patrons make merry while welcoming in the new year. Reservations are being accepted now.

Helen Arden Dances at Cocoanut Grove

Helen Arden, Boston danseuse, is winning plaudits nightly at the Cocoanut Grove, where she has been filling a limited engagement. Miss Arden is considered one of the foremost dancers of the country.

Helen Arden

Mickie Alpert, master of ceremonies at the Grove, announces that reservations are now being accepted for the New Year's Eve party. Alpert further announces that there will be an entirely new program of entertainment for the coming week, with several added attractions for New Year's Eve.

Mah Jong Will Have Anniversary Party

The Mah Jong, the only Celeste Chinese and American restaurant in Boston, will celebrate its first anniversary next week. This is the only Chinese night club in New England, operated by a group of Chinese all under 25 years of age. The pleasing personality of Winston D. Bee, manager, as well as the excellent food service and extraordinary cabaret shows have helped to make this place popular. The New Year decorations are beautiful. Plans have been made for a New Year celebration.

CHAPTER 47

TUESDAY night 6 o'clock, starry October night. In the little town of Williams, the sky was blue as sapphires, but already winter and a crystal lime chill was in the air.

Blake Winters, affable, easy-going young man, smiled as he settled himself and his radio near the kitchen table, where his nice blonde wife way laying the supper.

He put pad and pencil before him, stuck the radio phones in his ears and blandly ignored her frowns. She had to pass around him each time she went from the stove to the table.

With a severe tightening of her lips—a look that declared: "I'll fix him!"she went to a high chair where a baby was fussing, picked the child up and plopped it in the young man's lap.

He gave one indignant glance, grabbed a crust of bread and stuck it in the infant's wailing mouth. With a triumphant smile he returned to his absorbed listening-in.

All at once he jumped up, almost bouncing the child to the floor. With a stupefying: "I've just made 1500!" he went swinging to the little hall where the telephone was.

He could scarcely believe his ears. This was the electrifying message they had reported:

"Radio fans, radio operators everywhere, watch for an SOS sent by an amateur and signed 'Patricia Dawn.' Relay any such message immediately to KFKC in San Francisco. Reward of $500 for any clue to the present whereabouts of missing Patricia Dawn."

Yesterday afternoon Blake Winters had jotted down such an SOS. He got out his pad. It was there—repeated seven times. Grand Canyon. He wondered about it. He'd fancied some "Nut" was fooling with the air.

But gee, a real SOS, and he caught it! At 20 minutes past six that unforgettable Tuesday night, Blake Winters sent out his inspired message to the waiting station in San Francisco.

The message flew through the city. Like an angel of light; like a song from heaven, it entered the room where Laura, Barbara Dawn and Dickie waited. One wild, chaotic moment they stared in each others' frightened eyes. Then the boy sobbed and caught his mother to him. Alive and calling—their Pat!

Soon the mad word was in Guy's ears. "Alive!" sang Laura, clinging like a hysterical girl to the phone. "Yesterday at 3 she was alive."

Meanwhile Pat, in the canyon, thought of that time when Guy hurled through the air in his swift plane to the rescue of her brother Dickie. Oh, that he would pierce the gulfs of the canyon and save her and another little boy!

Not two hours since Barbara Bryce had stood with black, accusing eyes and implored;

"God, tell me—what have they done with him?"

Standing there and thinking he'd hurt her little son.

Not an hour and a half since that beautiful moment when Lee Templeton put out his hands in trust. An hour and a half since Lee Templeton had left with the ringing assurance:

"Send messages everywhere. I'll bring her back to you."

Now, almost uprooted with the word the air had brought, feeling a living flame in his mind, Guy talked with Harold Hemming.

"You got the bail set?"

"Yes—$25,000 cash or $50,000 bond. I'll have you out tomorrow."

"Tomorrow won't do! God—she was alive yesterday—twenty-seven hours ago. Ask me to wait twenty more? Can't you get the bail now? Has Templeton gone?"

"Yes—he left the moment the message came. He had a mail pilot driving him. Not easy to raise $25,000, even with Mrs. Dawn offering $10,000—every remaining cent she has."

"...don't take her money! I'll need that for a plane—for automobiles."

"You're mad. Guy, you're completely mad. And the ball on the earth won't permit you to leave the State."

"What! Do you mean to say I've got to stay here and leave Pat to die? You mean I can't answer that call?"

FIEND HUNTED AFTER LYNN FIRES

Police Guard Home After Third Attempt on Lives of Widowed Sisters

The second incendiary fire within two weeks, an attempted attack by a slasher and threatening letter, all directed at two Lynn widows, has caused a police guard to be placed at their home and a vigorous investigation started.

The women are sisters, Mrs. Julia Bartlett and Mrs. Harriet Ober, each about 50 years of age. They reside at 149 Fayette st., Lynn.

They were awakened by the cries of a cat in the cottage they occupy, and Mrs. Ober investigated. She was about to return to her bedroom when she was attracted by a puff of smoke through a trap door in the kitchen.

OFFICER GUARDS HOUSE

Pulling on the trap door, she discovered a fire, and notified the fire department. The fire was extinguished without much damage, but Deputy Fire Chief William Welch said that the nature of the fire indicated it had been set. There is no cellar in the house.

According to the authorities, anyone could easily crawl into the clearing under the house from the outside without attracting attention of those inside.

Police Captain John T. Curry assigned an officer on guard duty at the house when the women revealed that because of a previous attempt to set fire to the house and because of the receipt of threatening letters, they had been sleeping by turns at night.

For the last few weeks one of the sisters has remained awake while the other slept, they said, as they have been placed in fear of their lives. However, both happened to be sleeping when the cries of the cat awakened Mrs. Ober.

RAGS SOAKED IN OIL

Two weeks ago Mrs. Ober reported to the police that she discovered some rags saturated with oil in the yard in the rear of the cottage. Some of these rags were in close proximity to the back door of the cottage, she said, and they were scorched. Apparently, however, the blaze in the rags petered out before the house was ignited.

Just a month ago Mrs. Ober also reported to the police that someone had been prowling around the house at night. She went to the front door to peer out, someone made a lunge at her with a sharp instrument which cut through the screen door. She jumped back and slammed the door shut, she said.

At that time the police made an investigation and found that the screen in the front door had been slashed by a sharp knife or some such instrument.

Prior to that time the two women had received letters threatening their lives, and copies of these were turned over to the police and federal authorities.

The women told the police that they are at a loss to explain the attempts on their lives. Several years ago both were prominent in the Kitchens' Union and are at present employed as shoe workers.

Bride of 28 Days Asks Annulment

Because she now doubts the validity of her marriage to Andrew F. Foster, of parts unknown, Mrs. Margaret H. Foster of Medford, a bride of 28 days, has filed a petition for an annulment in Middlesex Probate Court at East Cambridge.

Boy Scout Saves Dog and Men Rescue Girl From Alewife Brook

William Jorgensen, 14, tested his boy scout training when he followed scout rules in saving a Boston terrier from drowning. This is William's dog Buster that gave the alarm by barking.

Carol Frazer, 6, of North Cambridge, was pulled out of the brook by Joseph Walsh and John Burke, both of Cambridge, when she broke through thin ice. (Staff photos.)

2 Saved From Death While Rescuing Girl

Two Cambridge men, breaking through the ice on Alewife Brook in North Cambridge, while rescuing a six-year-old girl from drowning, today owe their lives to a third man, who hauled them to shore with a rope.

Carol Fraser of 21 Madison ave., North Cambridge, first broke through the ice upon which she had been sliding. A large crowd witnessed the accident. Fire apparatus from Somerville and Arlington were called to the rescue.

Joseph Walsh, an attendant officer in the Cambridge school department, was the first to render assistance. He crawled out over the ice. When within reach of the struggling child he was plunged into the water as the ice gave way under his weight.

Meanwhile John Burke, who lives at Columbus ave and Madison ave, arrived. He too was plunged into the water just as Walsh had been.

Unmindful of their own safety both men made for the little girl and were able, after several unsuccessful attempts, to lift her out to the stronger ice.

Spectators crowding to the edge of the brook helped to bring the Fraser girl to shore.

An unidentified man, driving a truck, brought a strong rope from his machine and cast it out over the ice to the struggling men.

Both seized the end of the rope and the truck driver, assisted by spectators pulled Walsh and Burke to shore. Burke hurried to his home to change his wet clothing. Walsh was found to be exhausted and was hurried to the Cambridge Relief Hospital.

STEAL 1500-GAL. TRUCK OF 'ALKY'

A truck loaded with 1500 gallons of alcohol in 60-gallon drums was stolen from the foot of State st. today.

The owners of the truck said they did not know what the contents were, as the manifests were in Springfield.

The loss of the truck was reported to the police of Station 2 by officials of a transfer company, who said the truck contained 28 drums.

In their broadcast to the various police stations in Boston and to the police officials of neighboring cities and towns the Boston police said the drums contained alcohol.

Today, in the real estate columns of the classified Ads, you will find scores of opportunities for profitable investment.

SECOND DEATH HALTS TRIAL

As the case of Hall Gamage of Bacon st., Winchester, was called in Brighton court today on a manslaughter charge, the second victim of an automobile accident in which he was involved died at St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

She was Miss Mildred Sears, 20, of 234A Pleasant st., Brookline, injured on the night of Dec. 16 when Samuel Kayman, 38, of Washington st., South End, was killed.

As a result, Gamage's case was continued to March 15, after he had pleaded not guilty.

Kayman was driving Miss Sears to her home when his car was in collision with that driven by Gamage on Commonwealth ave. at Cottage Farm bridge. Kayman's car was overturned, the operator being killed and Miss Sears was fatally injured.

4 Hub West Pointers Guests at Reunion

The reunion, which began at 10 o'clock, was followed by luncheon at Hotel Touraine. The students will leave for West Point in a few days.

They were guests of Headmaster Walter F. Downey and Instructors Capt. Joseph McK. Driscoll, U. S. A., and William H. Means, lieutenant in the reserves and former Olympic star.

Quinn and Odenweller entered West Point through competitive examinations in the National Guard in 1926.

Blunda was an appointee of Congressman Douglas and Powers was the last West Point selection of the late Congressman James A. Gallivan.

Four Escape Blaze in Hyde Park Home

Fire early today drove Mr. and Mrs. Elijah C. Glover and their son, Joseph, 9, and Alden M. 14, to the street, scantily clad, from their dwelling house in Pleasant st., Hyde Park.

Alden, awakened by smoke, aroused the other members of the family and telephoned the fire department. An alarm was also sounded by a passerby. Damage was estimated at $1,500. The house is the property of Winfield Smith of Whiting st., Roxbury.

ADAMS RAPS STATE GAME CLUB HEAD

Says Association Is Trying to Divide State Into Private Preserves

Charges that the Massachusetts Fish and Game Association, of which Dr. John C. Phillips of Boston and Wenham is president, is attempting to divide the State into a "limited number of private shooting preserves," were made today in an open letter to the fish and game clubs of the State by Director William C. Adams of the State division of fisheries and game.

The reappointment of Adams as director of the division is being vigorously opposed by Phillips, who alleges Adams has been building a "political machine against the day when his job might be at stake," and that "the present warden force does not know whether it is a body of carpenters or State gum-shoe men.

It has taken years, but we now have Phillips and his committee out in the open," the Adams blast to the fish and game clubs read in part. "If they have their way this State would be divided up into a limited number of private shooting preserves. The rank and file of our town and city dwelling sportsmen would have no place to go.

"Apparently this crowd would like to reduce the number of licenses sold each year and the amount of fish and game shipped out by the division in order that a limited group would have all of the sport to themselves.

"They have the means to travel anywhere in this country or abroad to get their shooting or fishing. My interest is centered in the rank and file of our people, who must of necessity hunt or fish near home."

MILD WEATHER TO CONTINUE

The thaw which set in yesterday in New England continued today and will remain through tomorrow, according to the official forecast.

Greenville, Me., and Northfield, Vt., which are usually in the grip of sub-zero temperatures at this time of the year, reported readings of 30 and 34 degrees today. This was the first time since fall that such high temperatures have been recorded there.

The minimum temperature in Boston during the night was 42, while 10 a. m. today was one degree higher than at the same hour yesterday.

A light rain is expected to fall throughout New England tonight, with possibly snow in northern Maine.

The forecast for Boston and vicinity: Cloudy, probably with some rain tonight. Sunday, partly cloudy, not much change in temperature. Light shifting winds. The minimum temperature tonight will be near 40.

Master Painters to Meet Jan. 7-9

Whether master painters should be licensed by the State Board is to be discussed at the 39th annual convention in Horticultural Hall on January 7-9 of the Society of Master Painters and Decorators of Massachusetts.

Exhibitions of practical work, showing the latest color vogues especially in wall papers, will be featured. Outstanding master painters from Canada and the United States will be guests.

3 Pass Test for City Social Worker

An eligible list of three for the position of social worker at the Boston City Hospital was today established by the Civil Service Commission. Eight women were examined. The eligibles are Olga Alexieff, 4 Summer st., Hyde Park; Irene E. Hill, 41 Bowdoin st., Cambridge; Eva Bayard, 11 Lagrange ter., Lynn.

Residence Rule for Hub Policemen

A bill to prohibit appointment to the Boston police force of any person who has not been a resident of the city for at least six months prior to application for a position was filed with the Legislature today by Representative Louis M. Sullivan of Dorchester. At the present time there are no residential restrictions for applicants

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., Dec. 28 (AP)—Army's Cadets and Stanford's Cardinals, football rivals from the extreme Eastern and Western sides of the country, meet here today in one of the year's intersectional classics.

The two best known members of the Cadet squad, "Red" Cagle and Coach Laurence "Biff" Jones, will make their final bows to the gridiron and, strangely enough, the football finales will be witnessed by 70,000 spectators, 3000 miles from home and in the first appearance of an Army team west of the Rockies. Cagle will be graduated and Jones, the man who developed him, goes back into active service.

STANFORD HAS RESERVES

Those who make a close study of the game favor the Cardinals to take the measure of the invading stalwarts. Where Stanford has but Cagle and his running mate, Johnny Murrell, fullback, to stop, the Army boys will be called upon to halt the ball-lugging advance of nine backfield threats.

The soldier offense is built almost entirely around Cagle and is supplemented by Murrell's infrequent work. Coach "Pop" Warner changes all his behind-the-line men with the duty of gaining yardage. His various combinations are trained in deception and function on speed and power.

ONE CHANGE IN LINE

The Stanford line, with one exception, will be the same that withstood the charge of California Rose last month. Walter Heinecke, regular center, is laid up with a cold and will be replaced by Percy Taylor, a rangy 200-pounder who lacks experience, but whose defensive work on a par with that of Heinecke.

The outcome of the game probably will be determined to a large extent by psychology. Pop Warner has his Cardinals working together as a unit, but whether they will be able to muster the same amount of fight that they did against California is giving a source of worry. If they can a Stanford victory seems certain. If they can't, the Army may spring a surprise.

Released by Buffalo; Signs With Seattle

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 28 (INS)—Pat Collins, catcher, who was released from the Buffalo Club of the International League recently, has signed a one-year contract with the Seattle Club of the Pacific Coast League, according to reports here today. Collins was formerly first string catcher for the New York Yankees. He also was with St. Paul of the American Association.

Davis-Elkins Beaten

New York, Dec. 28 (INS)—Taking a lead a few minutes after the opening whistle and never relinquishing it, the Seventh Regiment basketball team defeated the Davis-Elkins College quintet here last night, 31 to 25.

Hearst Papers Send Coast Grid Game Over the Air

You can sit in on the last football game of the year this afternoon. Army and Stanford are playing at Palo Alto, Cal., and the Hearst newspapers are broadcasting the battle, over the Columbia System.

Ted Husing, nationally known gridiron orator, and Ernie Smith, big shot on the Coast, will do the announcing. The game starts at 5 o'clock, our time, and the preliminary stuff goes on the air 15 minutes earlier.

The broadcast will be handled by WNAC in Boston.

FLATLEY SAYS

TWO great stars say goodbye to the gridiron today, Chris Cagle and Johnny Murrell. They prove that the first seven years are the hardest—Knute Rockne is up and around again; just in time to start drilling his 1930 candidates.

English woman pays $10,000 for a greyhound; that's putting on the dog for fair—Bruins have won nine games in a row, with the accent on the row—Art Shires will find plenty of opposition when he fights Charlie Comiskey for that $25,000 salary—the Old Roman is no setup for anybody —Commission has ordered referees to work harder in the ring; well, somebody should work in there—Cav will go back to Fordham, which is a break for Fordham—the Rams couldn't find anybody else who could memorize the players' names—one more day for Christmas swapping.

The baseball stars of olden days
Took one long winter nap.
The boys today have changed their ways,
For now, they want to scrap.

Dear Nick:—I read your comment on Heinie Wagner and could not resist the urge to endorse everything you say about him. Time has finally taken a hand in doing something for this fellow who, in my opinion, was one of the finest figures that ever represented Boston in any sport.

"I never spoke a word to him in my life, but back in the old days I had many opportunities to watch him, and because of his gameness and modesty I always felt that some day he would get a good break.

"It hurt lots of us old fans when he was dropped, like any rookie, right out of the picture as soon as his usefulness as a player was over. Now that he is to have his chance, I wonder if enough of the old gang are left to give him a dinner before he goes South; just to let him know he has some friends who will always remember him.

"I can fill one table myself, and although I haven't been to a ball game for years, I'll be around this summer plenty. Let's start something.

H. BRUCE KINSMAN.

125 Arden Ave., Auburndale.

Which offers an opening for a Wagner revival. Heinie has it coming.

RABBIT MARANVILLE will second Spohrer if he battles Shires; and step in to flatten him if Art isn't equal to the job—the Rabbit is natural second; he finished that way among the shortstops—the midget threatens to be a big leaguer just as long as Jack Quinn, who pitched for ol' Abner Doubleday's first team—Johnny Drake, the Rubber Man, always has been a good eraser—the Salem football team found the real estate agents harder to get through than the Miami gridders —Cal Coolidge, author, is going south; he will boost Florida, at a buck a word—Johnny Buckley knows now that the best Christmas trees burn down.

Bill Tilden has quit American tennis, so Jack William can hardly be blamed. A T. tried hard enough to desert William.

DID you know that Bob Quinn's ball club hasn't been sold for him for more than a week—that the horse players haven't been making any of the Christmas bargains—that George Sisler doesn't intend to be relegated to the bench by the Braves —that Campolo figures to be the Sharkey victim in Miami—that Jack's summer battle with Schmeling undoubtedly will draw another of those million dollar gates—that New Year's will be very damp—that our old friend Ike Boone smashed all batting records on the Coast—that that doesn't prove a thing—that Jawn McGraw is down in Cuba while his Giants are having a mean court battle—that Arthur Brisbane recommends stomach pumps as New Years party favors.

BRUINS AFTER 10TH IN ROW TONIGHT

THE victory-mad Bruins breaking all National League records for scoring, victories and attendance as they skate their merry way towards their tenth straight victory will play the Canadiens in the Montreal Forum tonight.

A victory on that Canadian ice will put the Rossmen in excellent position to compile one of the most sensational records in sport.

Starting December 3 when they played the same French-Canadian team at the Garden the Bruins have put win to win and have defeated eight of the other nine teams in the league, registering over the Ottawa Senators twice, Montreal is the only team the Bruins have not faced since December 3 and they are scheduled to meet them on Montreal a week from tonight.

During the victory streak most of the Bruin scoring has been done by the Weiland line, with Cooney getting 9 goals and making nine assists for a total of 18 points. Dit Clapper has scored 7 goals and 3 assists and Dutch Gainor 4 goals and 9 assists. Among them the members of the Dynamite trio have scored the amazing total of 20 goals and 21 assists in nine games. No wonder the trio is in the first 10 of the league scorers.

WEILAND LEADS LEAGUE

Weiland is the league leader with 16 goals and 12 assists or 28 points. Gainor is tied for second honors with Frank Boucher of the Rangers with nine goals and 15 assists, and Dit Clapper is tied for fifth place with Nelson Stewart of the Montreal Maroons, each having 21 points. Each has scored 17 goals and four assists.

The Rangers game proved disastrous to the two wing members of the famous Dynamiters inasmuch as Gainor and Clapper after eight straight games of scoring went pointless. Neither was able to register an assist or goal, something which had not happened since December 1, when Martin Barry saved the Bruins a shutout in the last game they lost, in Chicago, 3-1.

While Clapper and Gainor were going pointless against the Rangers, however, Cooney Weiland was running his string of consecutive scoring games to seven. He failed to tally in the second game of the Bruins winning streak against Detroit, which the Bruins captured 2-1, but in the last seven games he has driven home eight goals and eight assists for a total of 16 points.

Even though the fact that Clapper and Weiland have scored but two assists in their 120 minutes of hockey might indicate a scoring slump on their part, the Bruins have little to worry about because the shock line of Barry, Galbraith and Oliver seems to be coming into its own and getting off on a serious rival of the Dynamite trio.

In the last two games the Barry line has scored 5 goals and 4 assists to the Weiland line's three goals and 2 assists.

ROSS STRATEGY

The change in the destinies of the Galbraith-Oliver combination seems to date back to the night of Dec. 13 when Manager Art Ross, showing his usually keen and uncanny judgment displaced Bill Carson by Barry, the rookie center in his so called first line.

Oliver and Weiland started to score from then on. It may have been as Charles F. Adams the Bruins owner suggests because each was relieved of certain defense work inasmuch as Barry is a great defensive center. It may have been that Barry could work in with them better.

Regardless of what has accounted for the improvement in the line, the shock troops have accounted for 10 goals and four assists in the last five games, as against 12 goals and 10 assists by the Weiland line.

Loyola Likes the Dark

New Orleans, La. (AP)—Loyola University likes to play football in the gloaming or anytime thereafter. Six experimental games at night were successful this year.

Bill Filed to Make Boxing Officials' Votes Public

A bill requiring referees and judges to make their decisions at boxing matches was filed with the Legislature today by Edwin A. Siebel of Holyoke. This is a follow-up on the campaign started in all parts of the state for better boxing regulations, following several exceedingly sour bouts in Boston.

The Siebel bill provides that at boxing matches the judges shall render their decisions by presenting their voting slips to an attendant representative of the boxing commission, who shall at the termination of the show announce the individual choices of the referee and licensed judges in each bout to the waiting newspaper men."

There has been sentiment for such a procedure, which would do away with the mystery that surrounds close decisions.

THRILLING TIGERS' FOLLOWERS

Bill Regan, young Boston Tiger defense man, who is the talk of the league as a result of his great showing in recent game. Only 20 years old and serving his first season in pro hockey, is rated by many as a big leaguer already. He hails from Sudbury, Ont., and is a find of Eddie Powers.

HARVARD SIX PLAYS TORONTO

New York, Dec. 28—Harvard's varsity hockey team will clash with the University of Toronto in its first major contest of the season at Madison Square Garden tonight.

Doubt as to who will be the first-string defence men for the Crimson this year was cleared up before the game, when Coach Joe Stubbs, himself one of the best defence men in Harvard history, stated that two former Milton Academy teammates, Sam Batchelder and Charlie Cunningham, will constitute the defensive duo against the Canadians tonight.

Batchelder at the start of the season was regarded as a certain regular, while Cunningham, who captained last year's strong freshmen team, appears to have nosed out Johnny Garrison of last year's varsity, in the battle for the job.

Barry Wood, Eliot Putnam and Charlie Lakin will continue to comprise the first-string forward line. Capt. Putnam and Wood, incidentally, were teammates of Batchelder and Cunningham at Milton Academy a few years back, so the Crimson team tonight will be composed to a large extent of former Milton boys.

Passing the Puck

By BILL GRIMES

EDDIE POWERS and Sprague Cleghorn, who will direct the Tigers and Reds, respectively, tonight at the Garden, are two of the best hockey coaches in the professional ranks. Powers and Cleghorn have no more business to be in a minor league than Eddie Shore. They know their hockey from start to finish and equally as important, they are keen students of human nature, which is of vital importance in handling players.

Considering the material he has had, Eddie Powers has been the miracle man of hockey since he assumed control of the Tigers. Regardless of the lack of ability of his players, Powers has had the Tigers right up in the fight for the title every season and last year he brought the championship to Boston.

Cleghorn has met with most remarkable success since he succeeded Jimmie Gardiner as coach of the Rhode Island Reds, winning five and tieing one game in six. In two weeks, he has whipped the Reds into one of the greatest minor league organizations in hockey. He has the respect of every player and they are all out there hustling to win from the first face off to the final whistle.

Doug Everett was not very considerate of his alma mater at the Arena, when, while playing for the University Club, he bored four goals in on Dartmouth. By the way, this same Mr. Everett from Concord, N. H., would not have any great trouble making the N. H. L. grade. He is a natural hockey player and the faster the company the better he looks.

Dartmouth is badly in need of practice. The players fought hard, regardless of the score, but they just could not click.

Lean S. Rogers, who is president of the Brae Burn Country Club, was surprised to learn that the New York Rangers are dickering to get his son, Dick, to join them. Dick has been playing on that team is Chan Hilliard of Arlington. Hilliard is a streak on the runners, is a clever stick handler, and packs a fine shot. Also, he has just enough fight to be effective.

Much has been written about the prowess of Jchany Chase and the Bigelow twins of the University Club, but from here the most promising player on that team is Chan Hilliard of Arlington. Hilliard is a streak on the runners, is a clever stick handler, and packs a fine shot. Also, he has just enough fight to be effective.

TIGERS AND REDS BATTLE FOR CAN-AM LEAD ON GARDEN ICE TONIGHT

By BILL GRIMES

FIGHTING for first place in the race for Can.-Am. League honors, the Tigers and the Rhode Island Reds will clash tonight at the Boston Gardens.

The Reds are tied with New Haven at the top of the standing, with the Tigers only half a game away, and the winners of tonight's contest will, for the time being, have a clear claim on the top berth.

The Rhode Island Reds have been the sensation of the Can.-Am. race for the past two weeks. Under Sprague Cleghorn, the Reds have won five and tied one in six starts. Until Cleghorn took charge of the club, Providence had lost five in a row and were tied for last place with Springfield.

Bill Grimes

Last Wednesday night in Providence the Reds put the Tigers over the jumps to the tune of 7 to 1. It was one of the worst lacings the C.A.H.L. champions ever encountered, and they are still smarting from their humiliation.

The Reds are traveling at a terrific pace. Every player is hustling without a second's letup from the moment he gets on the ice until he is relieved.

FINAL GAME FOR FRASER

The combination play of the Reds ranked with any in professional hockey and if their play against the Tigers on Christmas night can be taken as a criterion, they are unbeatable.

Gordon Fraser, who was loaned to Providence by Les Canadiens, is playing his final game under Manager Sprague Cleghorn tonight, for he has been traded to the Pittsburgh Pirates and will report there on Tuesday night. In order to bolster up the defense, Providence has signed Ludger Desmarais, who was with the Tigers for the past two seasons.

Demmy has been with the Millionaires of Toronto and Brantford of the Canadian Professional League this season. Under Sprague Cleghorn, the big Frenchman will get down to the serious side of hockey or receive his ticket back to Sudbury, Ont.

Manager Cleghorn has his two lines functioning perfectly and his entire team working most harmoniously. Johnny Gagnon, Art Chapman and Gizzy Hart are the starting forwards with Hago Harrington, Leo Gaudreault and Roger Cormier in reserve, while Jack McVicar and Gordon Fraser will be on the points with Desmarais and Lesieur as spares. Micky Murray will be in the nets, where he has been carrying on in fine style since working under Sprague Cleghorn.

Although Reg Mackey is not fit for heavy action, Manager Eddie Powers will offer a stronger aggregation than he was able to present on the last appearance of the Reds here two weeks ago. Ponzi Constant got back in the lineup last week against the Arrows and he will be on the defence tonight. Ponzi is a fighter regardless of the going and is a fine inspiration for his teammates. He has not entirely regained the strength in his recently dislocated shoulder but he can be relied upon to hold up his end against the Flying Frenchmen from Providence.

LEADING SCORER

Capt. Deacon Watte, who is the league's leading scorer, will start at center for the Tigers with Johnny Louckes and Yank Boyd on the wings. The offensive strength of this line is in a large measure responsible for the success of the Tigers this season. Watte and Boyd have been scoring regularly, while Louckes has contributed valuable assistance. Clark Heyd, Eddie Burke and Reg Mills make up the second line with Dutch Osborne relieving Burke.

Although Eddie Oatman and Reg Mackey have been given the call over Ponzi Contant and Bill Regan, the relief defense men are showing to much fine advantage both offensively as well as defensively they are liable to break into the regular lineup in the near future.

Regan is a newcomer, picked out from under Jack Adams' nose last summer by Eddie Powers when the Detroit Cougars were hot on the trail of the Sudbury star. Regan has been getting more than his share of goals and assists for the past week and his sensational playing has already been forwarded to the N. H. L. with the result that the Montreal Maroons are angling for his services.

HORSE SHOW AT RIDING CLUB

The annual New Riding Club junior invitation horse show will be held this afternoon at the club's ring at Norway and Hemenway sts., Back Bay.

Many of the young horsewomen and horsemen have entered their thoroughbreds in the saddle, jumping and horsemanship classes. The first class will be called into the tanbark ring at 1:45 p. m. and the show will continue during the afternoon.

The horse show committee is composed of Miss Betty Bird, chairman, assisted by Miss Lydia Lund, Miss Lydia Rotch, Hugh Bancroft, Jr., John S. Ames, Jr., and Nelson Kimball. What Ails Hockey?

Should the control of the National Hockey League remain in Canada or be transferred to the United States?

Should there be a commissioner of hockey?

Should a committee be appointed to revise and rewrite the rules?

Will there eventually be an American Hockey League?

Why are there so few American college hockey players in the professional leagues?

These and many other questions in which all lovers of the popular ice sport are interested, will be discussed by Bill Grimes, America's foremost hockey authority, in a series of articles, the first of which will appear on these pages Monday, December 30.

Boxer's Injuries Not Considered Serious

Toronto, Dec. 28 (AP)—Wee Willie Davies, Charleroi, Pa., flyweight, who fell from the ring during a bout with Steve Hocco, of Toronto, last night, and was carried from the Coliseum unconscious, was said at St. Michael's Hospital today not to have been seriously injured.

Although hospital physicians reported his condition as "not alarming" and said he merely had been stunned when his head struck the press table, arrangements were made to take an X-ray of his skull to make certain there was no fracture. No decision was given.

Settle Football Coaching Problems Next Week

EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

COLLINS MAY SUCCEED LOU LITTLE

NEW YORK Dec. 28 (AP)—Two football coaching problems may be settled next week in connection with the annual meeting of the American Football Coaches' Association.

Chuck Collins, University of North Carolina coach, is slated to succeed Lou Little as head coach at Georgetown and negotiations to bring this about may be completed within a few days.

Maj. Frank Cavanaugh is expected to sign for another year as head coach at Fordham, thereby setting at rest a flock of rumors dealing with his possible successor.

These are the only two outstanding uncertainties in the Eastern coaching line-up for 1930. If Collins accepts the Georgetown post, there will be an attractive Southern berth available, in addition to the head coaching jobs still open at Alabama Poly and the University of Oregon.

3 NAMED FOR GEORGETOWN.

Collins and Adams Walsh, Yale line coach, both have been mentioned for the Georgetown position, which Little resigned to accept Columbia's lucrative inducements.

Both are former Notre Dame men, playing together in the days of the Four Horsemen at South Bend. Collins turned out a fine team at North Carolina this year, losing only one game and leading the Southern conference in scoring. Walsh was head coach at Santa Clara, Cal., before going to New Haven.

The coaches' association, which holds its annual meeting Monday at the Hotel Astor as the forerunner of a week's athletic pow-wows, is expected to debate the rules and possibly recommend some changes.

In spite of the protests, however, it is not likely the coaches as a body will sponsor any action to withdraw the new fumble rule. The coaches contributed to writing this in the books last winter and the rules-makers are understood to be thoroughly satisfied with it.

HAS NO POWER.

The National Collegiate A. A. meeting Wednesday, will have echoes of the Carnegie Foundation's famous report on subsidizing and recruiting of college athletes. This group was instrumental in starting the investigation which led to the revelations of questionable practices and commercialism in college football.

Although the N. C. A. A. has no police powers, its officers, including Brig.-Gen. Palmer E. Pierce, its president, have expressed the view that something should be done about these alleged evils.

STASIAK RUINS SPAR MATES

Stanley Stasiak is busy in ring with a new staff of training partners to help condition him for his finals struggle with Joe Stecher, the ex-heavyweight champion of the world from Nebraska, at the Boston Arena next Wednesday night. His original set of mat mates all resigned after the Lion of Poland finished rouching 'em up in a brief workout.

Stasiak is working like a Trojan for his fuss with Stecher, which promises to wreck the grappling career of the Scissors King if rough and rugged mat warfare will turn the trick. The Polish Lion claims he will have a few new wrestling tricks to employ against Stecher when they climb into the ring in Paul Bowser's main event Wednesday night.

"I have been planning a match with Stecher for some time and now that I have finally secured a bout with him my friends may rest assured that I'll give him plenty to think and worry about," growled the Lion of Poland, who later changed other topnotch matmen side-stepping him.

While Stasiak is busy accepting resignations and enlisting training mates, Joe Stecher and his brother-manager, Tony, are going about in a quiet way with Joe's training for the big match. The Nebraskan right now is in the midst of a campaign he hopes will again land him on top of the heavyweight heap.

He apparently is not losing any sleep worrying over Stasiak's threats and his friends are confident he will subdue Stanley when they clash in a tussle that will send an "immovable object against an irresistible force."

Bob "Bibber" McCoy, the brilliant Cambridge grappler, has been engaged to take on Frank Yusko, giant Lithuanian, in one of the other attractive bouts. Yusko is a well known matman in the New England territory, McCoy increased his popularity by defeating Joe Dewitt last week.

George Kotsonoras, Greek champion, also will appear on the all-star card. Paul Bowser has succeeded in signing Freddie Meyers, the Hebrew heavyweight, as an opponent for Kotsonoras.

16 REMAIN IN TENNIS TILT

New York, Dec. 28 (AP)—The national pro or boys' indoor tennis championships have progressed far enough now to indicate that a handful of youngsters stands out above the rest as possessed of genuine tennis talent and ability.

Whether or not any of the young lads now doing their stuff on the hardwood courts of the Seventh Regiment armory ever will scale international heights is certain that such racquet wizards as Wilbur Jacobs of Hartford and Sidney Schapiro of New York in the junior division and Junius Parker, Al Bramley and Edward Feldman of Philadelphia, in the boys' class have possibilities which bode ill for the future of the game improving.

Another Chance

Each New Year means another chance,
Not like a broker with his stocks
Who stands beside a ticker tape
And waits for fate he does not shape
To raise his fortunes to the sky,
But as a pilot of the blue
Or as the captain of a ship
Who knows his goal both east and west,
Depends upon a mind alert, a hand that's true,
A heart that's sound, a faith that's strong.
We cannot wait for luck to turn,
But seize the new year as it comes,
And turn its prow where we would go
And then with body, mind and soul—

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

MUSCULAR rheumatism has a cause which must be found and removed. Each case is somewhat different from the other, but it is not a hopeless affliction as some think. There are many kinds of rheumatism, but this is one of the most painful to the sufferer.

This Day in Our History

PRESIDENT WOODROW WILSON, the twenty eighth President of the United States, was born at Staunton, Virginia, on December 28, 1856. He was elected to the Presidency in 1912, and served two successive terms in office. He left the Presidency broken in health.

UNIFORM GREAT ASSET TO THE TRAINED NURSE

Famous Expert Explains Psychology of Dress

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

HAVE you ever stopped to consider what the psychology behind the wearing of uniforms might be.

For surely uniforms invariably attract attention. We never fail to look at them.

Dr. L. E. Bisch

Another thing. It surely adds to dignity. Still another, is authority.

What individual does not crave dignity and authority? And do we not also love to bask in the sunshine of such dignity and authority? Don't we somehow feel important just to walk out with a uniform, as it were?

Lastly, uniforms are distinctive. They stand out from the rest of the clothes that others wear and which are drab and colorless by comparison.

There is another side to the wearing of uniforms, however, and that is from the point of view of the wearer.

Since a uniform adds so much to the personality of the wearer and in consequence feeds the ego of the wearer as well, it is logical to inquire whether sometimes, at least, such a uniform is not chosen in order to compensate for conscious sense of inferiority.

Now I do not mean to imply that every policeman, fireman, soldier or sailor, or anyone who does gold buttons is suffering from an inferior complex.

But surely some of them are and often, there can be no doubt, the motivation behind it is not even apparent to the individual in question.

For we do go into various occupations and plan for careers for reasons which lie deep in our unconscious minds and which we scarcely realize ourselves.

A man may join a police force, for example, because he thinks he is seeking adventure that requires feats of nerve, aggressiveness and bravery in emergencies. Yet an analysis of his mental processes, a bringing to the surface of his hidden, unconscious emotional states, may explain his apparently conscious and deliberate decision on an entirely different basis.

Whether or no, uniforms surely have a distinct value.

Even if they are used to counteract ideas of inferiority in the mind that have suggested their psychological worth cannot be questioned.

Because of these psychological factors behind the uniform, wouldn't it be a good idea for school teachers, for instance, to wear them?

Would not such a uniform add to their authority and dignity just as much as the uniform adds to naval and military men?

Have you not noticed what an asset the uniform of a trained nurse is?

It is true that the spirit of democracy in a country like the United States rather runs counter to the trappings of uniforms.

Yet we must confess that more uniforms would add more color to life. Even the uniform of the bellboys add something to a hotel.

Pat Prayed Guy Might Fly to Rescue

She visioned him as he rushed to save her brother from drowning. Would he find her in the canyon depths? She hugged Billy closer as the kidnapers drew near.

Miss Pat -:- Thrilling Romance of Airways

He gave such a wild, menacing look at that that Hemming was alarmed. He said persuasively:

"That's the law. I might be able to have you released."

How long would that take?"

"Tomorrow or the next day. Tomorrow, perhaps."

Guy's face was now darkly pallid thin and aquiline. His eyes had a luminous intensity. He gave a start when his friend put a hand on his knee; when he cautioned:

"Guy—don't be a fool. You're up against it. Don't make the case utterly black. Don't try any rash mean trick."

"No—I won't!"

Five minutes later Guy stood at the iron screening. On the other side of this stood Laura Dawn.

Her room had a sobbing, prayer-like intonation. Ah—yesterday at half-past three Pat was living. She kept the picture of that face—every move of his body . . . Big, lumbering fellow.

How eager Chase was to find that ransom, and how certain that Guy knew where the ransom was!

Tim Chase had Jim. Tim Chase liked the noble brown setter. Guy loved which he stood. She saw a glow under his eyebrows—that and a grim fevered intensity at his mouth.

But her face was in the light. Its eyes were beautiful. He could have blessed her because they shone with such youth and such trust, because they looked up and put all that trust in him.

He went to his cell. He sat on the edge of the cot. His thoughts rode on beams of light—infinitely swift. It passed through obstacles . . . through iron bars. He no longer felt his own weight.

One scene and one figure was in his mind's eye. It was the moment of Sunday night when he lay half prostrate in the hills, and Tim Chase, the detective, came upon him.

He had turned with a cry of relief, a cry of joy, hearing a human step; seeing a human form.

At ten minutes past eight, he asked if he might speak to the captain.

"Is Tim Chase downstairs? Will you phone and tell him I'd like to see him?"

Yes—Tim Chase was there—he'd come right up.

Guy had never felt so alert in all his life. He had never felt so taut . . . like a motor all tuned—all set—unconscious of the perfection with which it functions.

"Yes—quite a bit."

Less than a moment later Tim Chase led Guy in the elevator traveling from the jail to the Hall of Justice to the corridor on the first floor.

In Guy's mind was an exact diagram of the corridors the short turns leading from the elevator to room 105 captain of detectives room.

To this room Tim Chase would take him.

Just as they came to that turn [illegible]

How to Improve One's Handwriting

By MRS BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN.

Will you help me by criticising this letter freely, particularly my handwriting? I am anxious to improve my handwriting, sufficiently at least to make it legible. Most of my work calls for writing and I must use some speed.

I realize my handwriting is poor, and I am frequently reminded that it is not sufficiently legible to satisfy me. I must improve. I must improve it soon. Will you do your best to help me? Maybe you can suggest some place where proper instruction can be secured in the evening."

I have written to you for assistance because your column has consistently had a sensible and sincere ring to it, and I do believe you can help me.

AL.

YOU are very kind to come to me for assistance, and I am proud and glad to try to help you. I am extremely interested in a good looking handwriting, for to me it is one of the most civilized items to possess.

I cannot understand why your superiors should maintain that your handwriting is not legible. It to me it is supremely so. However, you have such an excellent foundation for a perfect handwriting that perhaps we could find a way to improve it. In the first place, I am so happy that you write front-hand, for little, I think, can be done to make a back-hand writing good looking or casually legible.

I believe that you could be more scrupulously careful about the formation of every letter, especially by your t's (make a definite cap on each one), your e's your l's and your ls. Then I believe that one serious trouble perhaps is that, at the endings of your words you swirl the last stroke too far up. Sometimes this gives the effect of interrupting the line above, and this may cause the dissatisfaction. Also, space your lines so that they are not so close together this will make for greater ease in reading. The loop letters—f, g, h, p, b, l—would perhaps be more legible to your employers if you give full value to the loop, both above and below the line.

I wonder if you do not hold your pen too tight—a little looser motion might make writing easier for you.

Now for your letter-form: Do not abbreviate any words in the heading or on your envelope. And especially do not abbreviate your name this mustn't be done. If you do not mean the name that I have signed, as you requested, but your own name, as you were kind enough to send it.) Also, after the salutation, do not use a semicolon and dash. A semi-colon must never be used after the salutation. Use a colon, like this:

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

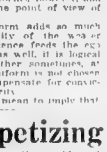
Appetizing Leftovers

IT is never ending this problem of leftovers. But there always seems to be some dish that should be remade and this "reconnecting," as my neighbor calls it, requires much thought, but really it is well worth the time spent, for good, wholesome foods should never find their way into the incinerator.



Martha Lee

The secret of using the leftover bits of food to advantage is to make the dinner think he is having something entirely different, that is an attractive to the eye and palate that second helpings will be demanded.

Meat and all other protein foods should be conserved carefully and every bit purchased used to the best possible advantage. The leftover bacon from breakfast may appear at the evening meal broken in small bits and in the guise of a garnish for the simple lettuce or combined with a plain muffin batter and served as dainty bacon muffins to accompany the main dish.

The bits of meat left from dinner the previous evening—"just enough to speak about" as my neighbor says, but plenty for four or six persons when extended with a half cup of cooked in salted water, then cooled and combined with the meat which has been put through the food chopper, a teaspoonful of grated or chopped onion, salt and pepper to season the leftover gravy to moisten the mixture or just enough white sauce to give the right consistency. Then remove the leaves from a head of cabbage, blanch them well and place a few tablespoonfuls of the tasty mixture on one end of each leaf, fold the edges over and wrap the leaf around the stuffing.

Secure the loss end of each leaf with a toothpick. Place the rolls in a greased casserole, pour over a well seasoned, slightly thickened tomato sauce to just cover the rolls and bake uncovered in a moderate oven for 25 minutes. Serve from the casserole.

MEXICAN BEEF

1 onion, chopped
1 tsp. celery salt
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
1 green pepper
1 red pepper
Thin slices of roast beef

Brown the butter, add the chopped onion, and cook for a few minutes. Then add the chopped peppers, tomatoes, salt, pepper and celery salt. Cook all together for a few minutes and add the thinly sliced roast beef. When the meat has become thoroughly heated, it is ready to serve.

INDIVIDUAL LAMB PIES

2 c. diced lamb or mutton
½ c. diced carrots
½ c. peas, cooked or canned
1 c. gravy or thickened stock

Cut into small pieces any leftover lamb or mutton. Cook the carrots until they are soft, add them, together with the peas, to the meat and pour the gravy or thickened stock over all. Simmer gently for a few minutes. Line patty pans with a thin layer of baking powder biscuit dough, fill with the mixture and cover the top with another thin layer of the dough. Bake in a quick oven until the dough is baked.

Faithfully yours,
MARTHA LEE.

Household Hints

An powdered borax on fruit stains, then pour boiling water through the fabric before washing or boiling it.

* * *

* * *

* * *

* * *

* * *

When boiling fish, add a few drops of vinegar to the water. The fish will then be white and firm.

* * *

* * *

* * *

Cracked eggs can be boiled by adding one teaspoonful of salt to the water, and they will not lose any of the white or albumen.

WHEN the time came for the letter O the members were all sure that it would stand for an orange. They were right. In these days of food information what else could it stand for? Oranges are so vital a part of the diet of every child that Nancy knew each young star would recognize the block at a glance.

While the quilt club members waited for the last arrival they discussed various ways in which they used oranges. One mother gave her child a glass of orange juice just before going to bed. She said she found the little girl had more appetite for breakfast when she did that. Another mother made an orange jelly and dressed it up with small pieces of orange sections freed from tough tissues.

Orange food was served that afternoon after the members finished making the quilt, later Nancy told how she made it.

Now they were ready to start. They cut the square from the newspaper, held it against a window pane with the 6½ inch square of white gingham over it and with a sharp pointed, hard lead pencil outlined the pattern. They did not try to follow the crazy lines within the orange. That represents the pattern in the cloth.

After the paper pattern had been marked onto the cloth the paper was pasted right side out card or tag board and dried under pressure.

The letter O was outlined on the white block. Some members used outline stitch, others a fine chain stitch. All agreed that the thread should be fast color embroidery cotton. It was pink or green, or lavender, blue or yellow according to the color scheme originally chosen for the letters and for the connecting bands of color.

Some members used soft orange, fast color gingham. One woman had a polka dotted material in soft yellow and brown. She used that, saying that her orange was russet.

One woman had some soft orange colored crepe. She used this to give the crinkly appearance of an orange skin.

In cutting the material a quarter-inch allowance was made all around. This was later turned under, basted in place. The orange was then pressed.

As they sat and admired their handiwork and sipped their tea Nancy told them how she made orange toast. "I toasted bread lightly, buttered it generously and then covered the top with a mixture of sugar and grated fresh orange rind. A few drops of orange juice were sprinkled on each slice. I put these slices under the broiler and let them toast until the sugar bubbled. And that's all there is to that. Do have some more Orange Pekoe tea," said she.

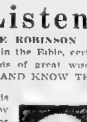
Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

THERE are, in the Bible, certain eight words of great wisdom —"BE STILL AND KNOW THAT I AM GOD!"

Those words were written by King David for the ancient Hebrews. But modern Americans have an even greater need of them, for our lives are filled with a clamor and confusion which that old world never knew. A million amusements . . . a million distractions . . .



Elsie Robinson

YET STILL, LIKE MOSES AND ABRAHAM, DAVID AND SOLOMON, WE NEED TO HEAR THE STILL SMALL VOICE OF GOD.

We may not call it God.

We may call it Beauty . . . or Wisdom.

But whatever we name it, each one of us has a need of it . . . each heart has felt, within the harsh shout of the world can never answer . . . each bewildered brain believes that within whose arms can bring comfort and peace and strength.

But we will never hear that Voice unless we shut out the noise.

Not merely the noise of the world. Noise of the world is oppressive, but a man may still hear God in spite of the racket of the street cars, the roar of automobiles, the bang and blatter and shriek and toot of our streets. But there is a certain other noise we will shut out the Voice more completely than walls of steel.

AND THAT IS THE NOISE WITHIN OURSELVES.

The blast of our self-pity . . . the hiss of envy . . . the bray of conceit . . . the bellow of hate . . . the whimper of fear . . . the snarl of peevishness . . . the mumble of suspicion . . . the snore of laziness . . . the clang of intolerance . . . the giggle and gaggle and guggle of foolishness.

These are the noises that really drown out God . . . and the Voice of beauty and wisdom.

BE STILL AND KNOW THAT I AM GOD!

Whatever you need, if you would find a solution . . . BE STILL!

Stop muttering and arguing and making alibis . . . stop complaining and questioning and whining and stop shouting YOUR opinions, YOUR prejudices, YOUR desires.

BE STILL!

LET THE NOISE IN YOUR HEARTS, YOUR VOICE, YOUR LIFE, DIE DOWN AND AWAY UNTIL YOUR SPIRIT IS EMPTY . . . EMPTY . . . AND SILENCE IS WAITING TO BE FILLED.

And then softly, gently, the Voice will come.

From all sides it will come.

From the silence which rises like one long chord through all things and all life . . . through laughter and tears . . . through summer and ships, through ploughed fields and budding trees and men bending over benches, through child-beds and graves and wedding feasts and labor conferences, through books and concerts and the mighty unfolding of new souls bread, through roses and heaped fruits and moonlight and snow.

From all sides the Voice will come.

Quieting your confusion, comforting your pain, answering your ignorance.

Whispering: "I COME . . . BE NOT AFRAID . . . BE STILL AND KNOW THAT I AM GOD!"

The Truth

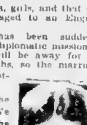
ABOUT FANCY IMPORTED ARTICLES

YOU remember my telling you of Aniella, girls, and that she was now engaged to an Englese baronet?

Well, he has been suddenly ordered to a diplomatic mission to Persia, and will be away for six or eight months, so the marriage has been postponed.

I met her the other day. We had a talk. She said quite frankly that she did not want to go to those "far away lands Eastern [illegible] did not happen to attract her, and she felt the climate would, perhaps, be trying.



Elinor Glyn

That to start upon a long sea voyage with a bridegroom she did not seem to her an ideal way to begin her wedded life. Now some girls would have revelled in this adventure, but others may be of the composed, poised nature of Aniella, and desire tranquility.

I asked her what she was going to do during Sir Walter's absence.

She said she meant to study all the branches of literature which would make her more polished and able to carry off her prospective high position with distinction, and that she was going to return to America to see her friends, and—buy some shoes.

Yes, Gracie and Maud, shoes. This reminds me I want to tell you in appreciation of the wonderful things you have in your own country, and not be so stupid as to fancy imported articles must be better just because they are imported.

Try to judge anything on its own merits, not upon the silly, false value of a label.

Some imported things are better, but many are not. I want you to be able to discriminate between the two.

THREE OF THIS SEASON'S coterie of buds are making their debuts today. Miss Constance Chipman, daughter of Mrs. Reeve Chipman of Brimmer st., and Miss Charlotte Stearns Smith, daughter of George Lawrence Smith, were presented at a luncheon at the Hotel Somerset this noon. Miss Chipman wearing a dress of gold beige crepe and Miss Smith gowned in green, they received their guests with Miss Marian Flint, the latter's aunt, and Mrs. Chipman. Among the 45 or so in attendance were the debutantes' sisters, Miss Faith Chipman and Miss Theodora Smith, Vassar graduate. Miss Constance Chipman is home from University of Colorado for holidays.

VALUE OF CLUB PUBLICITY STRESSED TO WOMEN

If women's clubs are to [illegible] ness agencies and keep the [illegible] public informed of their activities and progressive undertakings, the newspapers must know of them and through their aid the public broadcast the advance of women.

This was the gist of the message given to clubwomen by Miss Carolyn Peck, State Federation chairman of the department of publicity, in her address before the Boston Eastern Star Women's Club at their Christmas party in the Hotel Vendome.

It was a press and publicity party, embellished by a [illegible] musical program and [illegible] by Gold Star mothers and [illegible] veterans; Boston editors of women's club departments and press chairmen of local clubs.

It was Mrs. Edgar J. Nevins' day, for, as chairman of the press committee of the Boston Eastern Star Woman's Club, she had charge of the program and arrangements. Mrs Arthur Kellom and Mrs. George Whippen assisted her.

"In Massachusetts between 20 and 50 papers print advance news of the State Federation of Women's Clubs. Some use it weekly, others only when events of special interest to their locality are to be announced," Miss Peck said.

"During the year they give us hundreds of inches of space in addition to numerous items about the meetings and activities of the local clubs. The publicity value and service of these club departments cannot be over estimated.

HELPFUL HINTS

"What goal" we have for programs? What speakers are worthwhile? How can we help our community? What shall we study? How shall we plan our work? How can we raise money for our club needs? Shall we have a clubhouse? Study carefully your club pages and you will find many suggestions along these lines.

"You who have to send in notices and write-ups of club meetings can improve your style by seeing how others do it and noting what changes club editors make in your English.

"Nothing is more valuable for a press chairman than the study of newspapers and especially of their club articles. You will not only make your own work better from the point of good newspaper English, but you will also learn the kind of writing each paper prefers. Visits to club editors are helpful, for they are always glad to give suggestions."

Miss Peck quoted from Mrs. Alice Ames Winter's book, "The Business of Being a Clubwoman," which states:

"Publicity means a public understanding. It is so great an element in club success that it weighs almost one-half of the full strength of club activities. On it depends whether your club 'gets over' its purposes and its activities by awakening sympathy and support.

"Publicity has an effect also on your own club members. If through indifference or necessity they miss a meeting, a good write-up will make them resolve not to miss another," Miss Peck continued.

The program opened with greetings from Mrs. Nevins who introduced Mrs. Amy Young Burnham, State Federation music chairman. Mrs. Burnham led the audience in the singing of Christmas songs. Mrs. G. W. Giddings accompanied.

Especially interested were the disabled veterans who were the guests of the club. They joined the singing, the techniques of the presentations of Alta Lena Nichols.

Miss Anna Dickinson also participated on the piano. Solos were also sung by Mrs Charles E. Herring.

Riding Habits Given Smart Spotlight at Winter Shows

EVEN though the snows drive [illegible] horsewomen from the bridle paths it does not follow that riding habits are shelved for the winter months. Quite the contrary, they rise on a fresh crest of popularity with the opening of the horse shows all over the country. The best bridle fashions both for informal and formal occasions, are to be found in riding habits.

The formality which characterizes the rest of the mode this season is seen to have made its mark on sports fashions too, judging from these habits sketched from recent shows.

The side saddle habit is preferred for the formal event. The one sketched here is correct in every detail. It is fashioned of an Oxford melton cloth. The short opening at one side harks back to the days of the boots. The trousers beneath are cut on a new high waisted effect. A white pique stock and black derby complete the outfit.

THE cutaway coat in mens formal styling is another new note observed at a recent show. With this is worn a longer skirt which drapes across the front and over to one side. A silk hat, stiff cuffs with a wing collar and a white flannel vest are finishing touches.

The popularity of jodhpurs in the last few seasons has brought about the introduction of a jodhpur habit for formal wear. You may observe it on the small figure sketched here. Here again the stiff shirt, white vest and silk hat are used.

Right Accessories Are Most Essential

A HABIT without the right accessories is as good as no habit at all. Some of the small trinkets one needs have been jotted down here. These were the choice of the most correctly accoutered riders seen at the shows.

Especially designed for the horsewoman is a wrist watch in which the case has a unique house shoe and bit design and the strap is a leather cord imported riding gloves have the approved string fingers. Riding crops come in all sorts of designs. Matching cuff links and pins are indispensible and those that show small riding boots in color under crystal are very smart. A plaid flannel vest worn with the informal habit. And last come spurs of sterling silver with either black or brown straps.

Corset Is Firm Basis for Good Riding Habit

A DIVIDED corset fits smoothly and molds the figure to the sleek, slim lines necessary for the proper fit of the riding habit. Corset is a most a misnomer for the boneless garment of [illegible] silk, elastic with [illegible] sections and fleece facings it is so far removed from the stiffness usually associated with the term. It is an excellent garment for all active winter sports.

TOZIER PARTY LEAVES HUB

Laden with skis, snowshoes and all the other things that are used in winter sports, the party, including men, women and children from all sections of Greater Boston, with a few from Maine and New York.

The Tozier party this year will participate in the inauguration of the Ottawa Winter sports season. With the Chateau Laurier as the official headquarters and the Rockliffe Park outdoor sports and the natural skiing facilities in Canada the Tozier party will get under way early Sunday and continue for four days, including a New Year's Eve celebration at the Chateau Laurier. The party is being escorted by R. E. Holmes, assistant general passenger agent of the Boston & Maine, and T. E. P. Pringle, general agent of the Canadian National Railways in Boston.

Commerce Chamber Holds Sales Rally

More than 500 sales representatives of prominent manufacturing and merchandising concerns in Boston and vicinity are participating in the annual sales rally being held under the auspices of the Executives and Sale Managers Clubs of the Boston Chamber of Commerce. Speakers were L. H. Boudreau of the Syracuse Washing Machine Corporation who talked on "Our Field Man in Action" and Frank Woodbridge of Prince & Whitely, New York whose topic was, "Preparing to Sell This Year."

The rally was preceded by a luncheon.

Sues Estate of Divorced Husband

Serene R. Briggs of New York city has brought a bill in equity in the Superior Court of Suffolk County to reach and apply property of Arthur C. Briggs of Boston, her former husband, to satisfy the payment of $480.98 due her as alimony.

Mrs Briggs obtained a divorce from her husband in Chatham in 1922, and he was ordered to pay her alimony of $166.66 every month, and now is in arrears to the amount of $480.98.

Elected Directors

New York, Dec 28 Philip Stockton, president of the First National Bank of Boston, and Charles Reiknap, president of the Merrimac Chemical Company, have been elected directors of the Monsanto Chemical Works of St Louis, increasing the membership of the board from nine to 11.

AUCTION BRIDGE

by WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD

The development of Contract has given rise to greater freedom in the use of take-outs and suit showing by partners.

The use of such and showing at Contract has influenced the handing of similar situations at Auction. In this deal, for example following South's one Spade and North's take-out in two Diamonds previous practice at Auction would have suggested an immediate No Trump on the part of South as he holds two suits well stopped and three cards to the Jack of the other suit not bid by North. However, Contract bidding has brought out the fact that further suit showing with South's particular holding is usually preferable to an immediate No Trump following partner's take-out.

Salient Points of Bidding

Auction: South bids originally one Spade. West passing North takes out with the higher ranking of his two suits, bidding two Hearts. East passing, South must now decide whether to bid No Trump or show his Heart suit. While he holds three Clubs to the Jack in addition to his Spades and Hearts, the bid of two Hearts is preferable to that of an immediate No Trump to feel out the Club situation. North, holding double stoppers in the two suits other than the two shown by partner, bids two No Trumps.

Contract: South bids one Spade as at Auction and North takes out with a forcing bid of three Diamonds, a bid of one trick more than necessary. Such forcing take-out shows a five to six probable trick hand with side values in at least one suit other than that bid and is an implied demand upon partner for a re-pense other than a pass.

Following North's forcing take-out, South bids three Hearts. As North has shown values in at least one suit other than that bid South's values could well be in Hearts and thus South's response of three Hearts is a definite preliminary either to the game bid in Hearts or No Trumps depending upon the side suit held by North. As at Auction, the final declaration becomes No Trumps, three No Trumps being bid by the North player.

Salient Points of Play

East leads initially his fourth best Club, this opening being preferable to the Spade lead in view of South's original Spad bid. West's ace-queen King is played to this lead, North winning with the Ace.

Declarer now starts to count the two hands. He can figure definitely on three Clubs, two Diamonds, two Spades and one Heart trick, or eight in all. To go game therefore, he must either develop an extra Spade trick by a finesse or two Heart tricks. As a necessary preliminary to the setting of an extra trick in either suit, Declarer first attempts to drive out the Ace of Hearts leading the 9 from own hand. The 8 being played by East and Declarer going up with the King in Dummy rather than finessing immediately against the Jack.

The King of Hearts winning, Declarer now crosses over to own hand he leading Club 8, winning with the Queen. Again a Heart lead from own hand, forcing East's Ace. East now leads another Club forcing the Jack in Dummy and establishing two Club tricks in own hand, if he can bring them in. Declarer now assumed of an extra Heart trick or one tricks in all, can afford to chance a double finesse in Spades and accordingly crossing over to own hand by leading the Diamond 2, winning with the Ace. As will be seen the 8 finesse in Spades holds, thus giving Declarer five odd by taking a second Spade finesse and laying down his good Queen of Hearts, thus losing in all but two Heart tricks.

EVENING New York Stocks AMERICAN News of Street MARKETS

INDUSTRY IS IN ITS MOST ACTIVE YEAR

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

American business and finance are now at the close of their most active year in history. Industrial operations for 1929 as a whole will show good gains over the previous high record year, which was 1928. The tapering off at the end of 1929 is more than offset by the higher rate prevailing earlier in the year and is considered by many to be its normal sequence.

The big crash in the stock market has put the investment world on a sane basis, which is a decided improvement in most cases over a year ago, which latter is quite as true in Boston as in New York.

There is no evidence that excessive stocks of goods are now on hand, and the current situation is generally regarded as promising for 1930.

BUYING POWER ASSURED

New England conferences have resulted wage earners that there will be no reductions during the year on the threshold of which we stand. This means that buying power will not be further curtailed.

The number of people directly affected by the fall of the stock market in this section is problematical and many estimates have been made, all of which may be wide of the mark. The number is in many quarters, however, has certainly been placed far too high.

The commodities markets were undoubtedly saved from having a farming effect on business when stock prices broke because they had been declining instead of becoming inflated.

In the cotton textile field New England mills are considered to be in a better position than the industry as a whole. About 90 per cent of the fine goods in this line are produced in New England, the demand is good, and is expected to remain good through 1930.

The woolen industry faces keen competition, and a dull period for wool is now in return in the forecast for 1930 is reasonable quarters.

FAVORABLE FACTORS

Shoe production has been about 8 per cent above that of 1928, despite inroads of foreign shoes, as the result of the no tariff policy. Inventories are conservative. Leaders expect 1930 to show at least slight gains over 1929 in sales volume.

Leather stocks are low with prices well maintained. A decline in hide prices for the first quarter of 1930 would not surprise the industries, especially as prices were well held up during December.

In the transportation field there has been very general prosperity during the past year. The railroads of New England railroads show good results for the year as a whole. New Haven and Pandora Railroad took fair-being particularly strong.

Over-production is the factor that must be overcome during 1930 by most industries.

The building industry was checked when money rates went up and lower rates now prevailing are expected to prove slowly corrective.

The favorable factors for 1930, as visible today, outweigh the unfavorable. If leaders in finance and business during the new year continue to display the high courage and enterprise shown in 1929, these agents to be little to cause gen ne worry.

Boards of directors are best equipped to look into the probable future of their respective corporations. It is perhaps significant that large boards in general have advanced during the past month the rate of optimism as displayed by some corporations as against the reports that they showed late in 1928.

At the outset of 1929, only a few of us dared predict unreservedly that it would in many ways outdo its predecessor, but the prediction was well fulfilled. Careful study of the current outlook in the various lines in which New England is chiefly interested leads to the belief that it is safe today to offer a similar forecast for 1930.

Telephone Earning Near $12.50 a Share

American Telephone & Telegraph's earnings for 1929 will be record totals, and on the average shares outstanding during the year it will show earnings of approximately $12.50 a share against $12.11 for 1928.

Boston Bids Made on Attleboro Loan

Attleboro awarded to W. O. Gay & Co. at 3.98 per cent $100,000 5-year, dated December 30 and payable October 30, 1930. Business Men Are Chief Givers, Survey Reveals

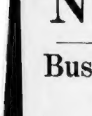
By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, Dec. 28—Gifts made by Americans have averaged $2,000,000,000 a year for the last 10 years. The 1928 total was computed at $2,330,000,000. This year's gifts have been very numerous, but no special foundations of the Rockefeller-Carnegie magnitude have been announced.



B. C. Forbes

In other lands it is not wholly unusual for wealthy individuals to bequeath money to charity. But the United States is the only country where gigantic donations by living men and women are common.

We have more grand-scale philanthropists than all the rest of the world combined.

• • •

The Rockefellers have again led the field in munificent giving on an international scale. When the Rockefeller Foundation and the Laura Spelman Rockefeller Memorial were consolidated at the beginning of the year their combined assets totaled $264,802,447, easily the largest philanthropic fund ever known. Up till then Rockefeller's four chief distributing agencies, the Rockefeller Foundation, the Laura Spelman Rockefeller Memorial, the General Education Board and the International Education Board, had distributed from capital funds no less than $225,000,000. And, of course, many millions have been disbursed regularly from income. The Rockefeller Foundation alone has had an income of some $10,000,000 a year.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is now the Santa Claus of the Rockefeller family. His father quite some time ago turned over the handling of his fortune to his only son and, incidentally, is extremely proud of the universal praise and judgment shown by "John" in the discharge of these very onerous duties.

The Carnegie funds have not fared as well as the Rockefellers'. Some of the scholastic recipients of Carnegie largesse have had their pensions reduced. Carnegie had no son to follow in his footsteps.

The Harkness family, whose millions also came from Standard Oil, are again very prominently to the front philanthropically this year. Their benefactions are rapidly approaching those of Carnegie. This year alone Edward S. Harkness has made announced gifts exceeding $12,000,000, including $8,392,000 additional for Harvard.

Julius Rosenwald made one gift of $3,000,000 for the Rosenwald industrial museum of Chicago, now known, at Mr. Rosenwald's insistent request, as the Museum of Science and Industry. Mr. Rosenwald has made other big donations apart from the millions distributed from the income and principal of the Julius Rosenwald Fund.

Senator James Couzens, whose huge fortune came from the Ford Motor Company, has established a $10,000,000 trust fund for the benefit of children. Maurice Falk, Pittsburgh industrialist, has an $10,000,000 Laura Falk Foundation for "educational, religious, charitable and public interests."

J. P. Morgan has donated $2,000,000 to the New York Hospital, and million-dollar gifts by others have not been rare.

One illustration of the large-heartedness of Americans is afforded by the fact that the New York American alone has raised a Christmas Fund of $140,000 for the poor, while other newspaper organizations combined have raised more for similar purposes.

One notable tendency is for wealthy employers to make bonus distributions either in cash or stock, to faithful employes—Louis Ramberger, for example, gave $1,000,000.

Promoters Ask Investors to Recoup by Switching

Copyright 1929 by Universal Service, Inc.

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Dec. 28 Speculation represents the exchange of hopes for cash, and doubtless it will go on as long as human masculinism is what it is.

The recent speculative debacle is likely to make no permanent changes in the financial behavior of amateurs.

• • •

Counting on the relative impressionism of the human mind to change, promoters have resumed their uses of the ancient lures. Some are even going so far as inviting the public to exchange diluted high grade stocks, on which they show paper losses for their own beautifully engraved, conventional certificates, on which exravagant promises are made.

• • •

Garfield Crawford, executive vice-president of Consolidated Oil, the vessel Oil and Gas Co., Oklahoma City, does me the honor of inviting my name on his anchor log. Or should I say list of prospects. Although a complete stranger to me and doubtless to the others to whom he has broadcasted his proposal, he begins his letter in this friendly formal manner: "Will you accept $20 as a Christmas gift from us? Such a gift should be very interesting to you when you learn it may supply the basis of a profitable investment."

Unfortunately closer scrutiny reveals that the check is not an order for cash but merely a credit which may be applied toward the purchase of memberships in the preorganization syndicate formed in connection with an development.

After outlining in glowing, if not flamboyant terms the business of this "investment," Mr. Crawford is the good samaritan, closes his note in this intimate manner: "Wishing you a merry Christmas and a glorious and prosperous New Year, and trusting the enclosed check will be the means of bringing to you a prosperity hitherto unrealized by you," etc.

This lying out of the Christmas spirit with a stock-selling campaign represents the furthest north in the movement to commercialize a holiday of deep spiritual significance.

• • •

Apparently Mr. Crawford's letter is not intended primarily for financially literate persons, for, though he gives the price of memberships and indicates how many shares for the proposed corporation management would be commercialized, he gives no data on the total capital structure. Any competent investor would want and expect such data, and its omission leads to the conclusion that a new and different class of investor is sought. The letter appeals to the emotions, rather than to an analytical appreciation of corporate data.

• • •

In order to seem perfectly fair to himself the promoter company sells memberships in the syndicate on a money back guarantee basis. If legitimate security dealers in Wall Street would pursue this western policy, it would be a public benefit. It would enable the public to have the prospects of speculative profits without the risks of speculation. In the face of this, such an offer is economically unsound.

Like hundreds of others, whose names were doubtless found on published lists, I have received an option right, which expires on December 24. This constitutes notice to Mr. Crawford that Christmas will have come and gone without my exercising the privilege to exchange actual cash for his membership.

Of course, those who exercise the option and make a down payment of $20 for membership in 2,500 will be entitled to cancel up to February 10th. Although the purchase it not fully paid for for five to seven months, participant begins in January to share in the dividend disbursements.

• • •

Apparently, since the financial recession, the public requires stronger inducements. The company now offers the promise of 30 per cent in disbursements. Earlier in the year it offered only 12 per cent.

Mr. Crawford's letter and literature enclosed are significant for what they omit as well as for what they include. In addition to a scarcity of data which would be useful to the security analyst, Mr. Crawford omits the fact that P. E. Rosenzweig, Earlier in the year, securities at Jefferson City, Mo., issued a "cease and desist" order against the company on June 13 last, preventing it from legally offering its securities in the Commonwealth of Missouri through salesmen. Inquiry has disclosed that the order is still in effect. The securities of this company were recently offered by the Securities Service Company, 285 Wall Street, Kingston, New York. A representative of organized legitimate business in Kingston searched for the company, but was unable to locate

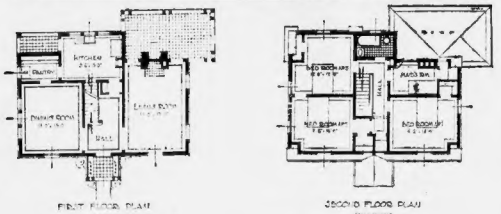
Dutch Colonial Home at $10,000



FIRST FLOOR PLAN SECOND FLOOR PLAN

A GEM OF A HOME, WITH GRACEFUL LINES
By National Modern Homes Bureau, Inc.

FOR those who like the Dutch Colonial style, here is a house, H. A-73, that will offer a strong appeal.

The Dutch style is enjoying a much-deserved popularity. The pleasing, graceful lines of the Dutch roof, the delicate detail and the appearance of a real home, these are the qualities that are so much admired.

The architects have designed this little house with thought to every detail, however small and seemingly unimportant. The result—the pictures and plans speak for themselves. The house has been called "A Little Gem."

What could be more pleasing than the refreshing contrast of this little white house setting snugly amid a bower of trees and shrubbery with a foreground of neat green lawn?

This is the kind of a place that comes to mind when we think of a home in the suburbs—a neat white cottage with a green roof, a tree or two to shade the entrance porch and the living porch, a stretch of green lawn, shrubbery banked on one side for fragrance and for color, and an entrance porch with benches and vine-covered trellis to bid one welcome and offer a suggestion of old-time hospitality within.

Nor are the plans of this house disappointing; they give all the exterior promises, they are convenient, compact, and, above all, livable and homey.

The ceilings are low, after the manner of the old Colonial houses; there is plenty of wall space for furniture, and windows to let in the sunshine are not lacking. The interiors furnish and decorate in a charming manner and complete an ideal little home.

Cost about $10,000.

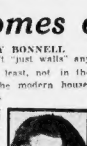
COMPLETE working plans and specifications of the house illustrated above may be obtained at nominal cost from the National Modern Homes Bureau, Inc. Any technical questions regarding this house will be answered without cost or obligation. Address the National Modern Homes Bureau, Inc., Real Estate Dept., Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

The Fine Points in Homes of Today

By BETTY BONNELL

WALLS aren't "just walls" any more. At least not in the conception of the modern housewife who is "up" on color, harmony and proportion in interior decorations.

The interior surface finish of walls can make or mar the appearance of a home. A dull, drab surface or a harsh, shiny affair in each room are enough to make the occupants unhappy, to say nothing of whispered criticisms that go the rounds on the outside.



Betty Bonnell

I've been noticing of late a marked trend toward soft-textured finishes in wall materials that lend themselves so nicely to attractive treatments. Such niceties as stains, multi-colored paints and even stencils seem to have become a godsend to housewives who are finicky about backgrounds. You can really do wonders with color, tastefully and properly applied.

The popularity of Spanish and Mediterranean types of architecture has given rise to a style of rough finishing of interiors that has opened new fields of possibilities in room treatments. Plastered surfacing is available with many fascinating pigments already mixed or the coloring may be done after the plaster is applied.

Of course it's common knowledge that wall paper in novel patterns has staged a decided "comeback" in the new vogue. One can transform a house from an ordinary place into a gem of cheer and color by proper selection of paper for the walls but don't go in for the gaudy, sharp, jutty tone contrasts from room to room.

There's a lot to be said about walls with uneven mottled effects that can be produced by brush or actually done by hand. Some of the manufactured ones are made so ingeniously that they really look as if they were finished by hand.

MAY SET TILE ON OLD FLOOR

In remodeling all that is necessary for the installation is a strong, rigid foundation, such as is provided in floors, walls and ceiling of practically every house. Tiling can be set upon wood, brick, concrete, steel, hollow tile, gypsum and other materials.

Tiled floors are frequently placed directly on top of existing floors. On the other hand, when the surface of the tiled floor is to be on the same plane as that of he old floor, the old floor can be removed, a sub-floor built between the joists and the tilework set upon the new base. A concrete bed is applied and the tiles are then neatly set in a mortar bed.

Many tiled baths are being installed in old homes during remodeling operations.

LITERATURE on standard materials and products used in the construction of the modern homes will be sent to you if you will check the subjects that interest you and mail to the National Modern Homes Bureau, Inc., Real Estate Dept., Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

Buckley of 19

Smart and Spunky Police Officer

IF there is no municipal medal with which to decorate William F. Buckley, the young gentleman must at least be told that he has won the golden opinion of fellow-citizens.

Mr. Buckley is the police officer who, in the early hours of the morning a few days ago, discovered two young burglars, busy at the safe of a Blue Hill Avenue drug store.

Single-handed, he arrested them both; and was the means of the capture of their chauffeur.

This would have been good work on the part of a veteran, Buckley has been a policeman only four months.

His beat is in the Mattapan section. He had never made an arrest. He must have wondered if he were ever going to make one.

A parked car, bearing a New York number-plate, caught his eye. He made a note of the number. Then, "trying his doors," he found that an entrance to the drug store had been forced. Within were the two young men.

Ordering them to march out, with hands uplifted, the spunky cop sent a passing citizen to the nearest patrol box, to tell Station 19 about it. Observing that the New York automobile was about to leave, he sent its number in. The flying squadron came, flying.

This young man is a worthy addition to a worthy police force. Nine-tenths of all its members can be depended upon to be just as watchful, quite as attentive, equally valorous, whenever the occasion calls.

SMART police work, it seems to us, calls for PUBLIC recognition. On behalf of his fellow-citizens, the Boston Evening American extends to Patrolman William F. Buckley the thanks and best wishes of the community.

Kemal's Good Example

Some Americans Might Follow It

(Copyright, 1929)

KEMAL PASHA, boss of Turkey, has always been dressed fashionably, like his neighbor ruler, Mussolini of Italy.

Now he gives up his London tailor, who knows how to make trousers hang "like a poem," and will wear only things made in Turkey.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Thoughts while strolling: The carbolic acid odor of a hospital street. Department store boys talking Park ave. Antoinette Perry, once Warfield's leading lady. Now producing plays. Bishop Manning. A fat lady hails a taxi by whistling shrilly through her teeth.

Mena. Gregory, the Belleve alienist. Bugs Baer is growing stout. The chauffeurs who stand in sullen groups about hotel entrances. W. A. Brady and his big cigar. Haberdashery sign: "We may have a shirt—like the one you lost." Candy prices drop. Cole Porter, who is responsible for the most musical comedy hit.

Chilio Carminiti who once played with Duse. Those beefy fellows with lobster red necks who take sidewalk race horse bets. Movie banner: "We warn the audience before turning on the lights." It costs five cents more a dish to eat at the Fifth ave. automats. Isabel Patterson, the book critic.

That "Sez you, sez I" patter gives one a pain, sez I. The noble old theatrical Roman Otis Skinner. And his daughter, Cordelia. Clare Briggs, a Reedsville, Wis., boy, who made good in the city. Ernest Glendenning looks something like Herbert Hoover.

What's become of the boy who used to call his father Pop? And his mother Mom? It takes an actor, somehow, to wear a dressing gown. Most of us look like something or other in an Old Mother Hubbard in them. The reporter who made Winsted, Ct., famous exploiting faked stories.

Why are butchers usually so ruddy-cheeked? The Klaw theater is now the Avon. A fresh water pearl in its shell in a jewelry shop window. Whatever happened to Jack Rose, the hairless gambler? The theatrical ticket speculators are not doing so well.

Frank V. Storrs, the play program millionaire. Who had a box at the opera and villas at Palm Beach and Cannes. Impossible to keep up with the new breed of dogs. All the bloods seem to be wearing brown. That sickly yellow haze of a wintry New York morning.

A hatless, shoeless and bewhiskered John the Baptist with flowing hair to his shoulders roams the Times sq. district. He ventures into office buildings and accosts pedestrians along the streets to inquire about their spiritual status. He departs with the throaty injunction: "Pray, brother, pray. The millennium is near!"

In a restaurant today I saw a young girl not more than 20, smoke, by actual count, 14 cigarettes during the progress of her meal. She would stop after almost every bite to inhale a puff or so. My head spun just looking on.

The head waiter in the same cafe upset a familiar Scotch tradition. He pointed to a Scotsman who is one of the oldest customers of the place. "He is the most liberal spender and the most extravagant tipper who comes here," he said.

What is classed as Scotch miserliness is often a mere caprice, expressing itself in hoarding strings, rubber bands and letter clips and removing uncanceled stamps from letters.

My own streak of Scotch thrift is in seeing how many shaves I can squeeze out of a tube of shaving cream. In actual financial saving that would probably mount up to about ten cents a year. And probably wastes $10 worth of time.

Every day or so another cherished illusion curls up. One of the toughest free-for-all scrappers among the dock wallopers of West st. is known as "Cuih." His name is Cuthbert.

They were talking of proud moments. Mine was in Paris several years ago. The only French I knew was the address of the apartment where I was living, 21 Avenue Henri Martin. Walking along the Champs Elysees a lady motioned me to her carriage and asked in English if I would direct her French driver to 21 Avenue Henri Martin. I did and walked on—stepping from cloud to cloud.

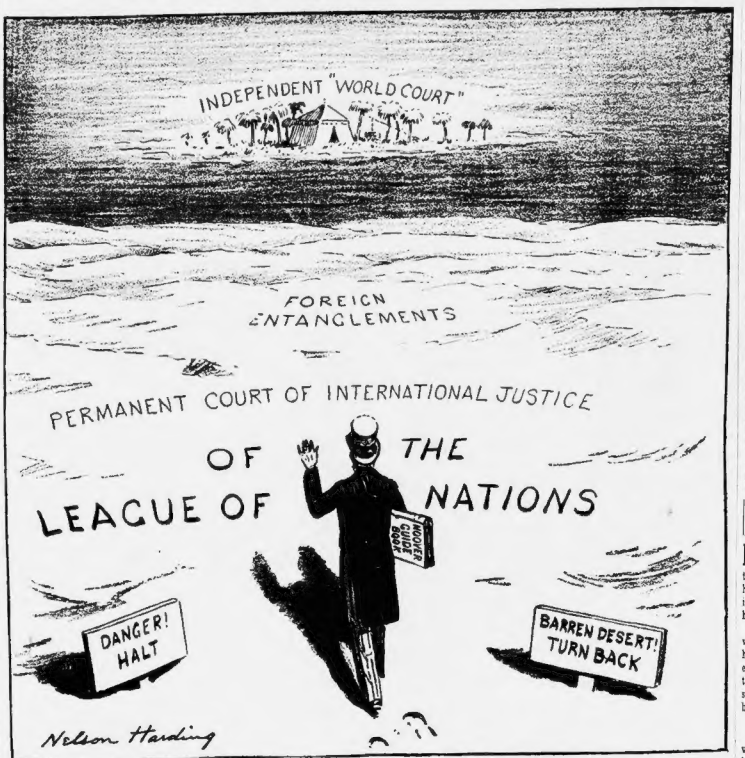
That Misleading Mirage

By NELSON HARDING



An optical illusion makes
The luckless traveler believe
That safety and security

So Uncle Sam, with trustful step,
And blind to warnings on each hand,
Pursues deceptive visions far
Into the trackless, shifting sand. —N. H.

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

FEW, or less, diplomatic infidels seem to realize what has happened to President Hoover's request for food ships.

Mr. Hoover is anxious to feed women and children during the next series of wars sponsored by the League of Nations.

When the next war gallops up with the four jockeys there will be NO neutral nations.

That's all we wanted to know.

The negotiations have finally gotten down to a banquet of brass tacks. So much neutrality has been violated that the league unscrambles the gordian anagram by doing away with neutrality altogether.

We got our answer in a nutshell. And it's wormy.

That's just one of our simple requests. We don't know what will happen to our more important ones but you can bet that the rest of the apple will not fall far away from the sauce.

America has distributed international groceries all over the commercial universe. Belgians, French, Chinese, Russians and Serbians have all indulged in our star-spangled delicatessen. And now we get our thanks on a complaint blank.

We admit that the same food that will win a war will also start a fight at breakfast.

But if the league is a philanthropic institution then Simon Legree used a feather duster on Uncle Tom's coat.

Faith, hope and charity dwindle like Alice after she took a sniffer of that kettle marked, Drink Me.

Mr. Hoover is a specialist in grub armadas. He fed the world for four years. When Europe kisses the hand that fed it, a bite is a manicure.

The league is at least honest in allowing us to know that everybody with whiskers ain't Santa Claus.

Now we know what to expect but not how to avoid it.

H. G. Wells Writes on

"The Science of Life"

In Collaboration With

Prof. Julian Huxley and Geo. P. Wells

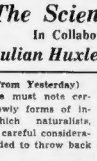
IN passing we must note certain odd lowly forms of invertebrata which naturalists, after the most careful consideration, have decided to throw back into the vertebrate basket. They are not full vertebrates certainly, but they are put with them as associates, distant cousins, semi-vertebrata.



H. G. Wells

The lancelet—Amphioxus (sharp at both ends) is its systematic name—is an inconspicuous little marine animal, whitish, translucent, shaped like a flat toothpick, and less than two inches long.

It lives a retiring life, burrowing in sand in shallow water round most coasts, and was considered by its discoverer to be a slug. But subsequent investigation has removed it from the low phylum to which it was assigned and placed it with the vertebrates.

If it is not legitimately a vertebrate, it is at least a poor relation.

This little two-inch slip of life has a smooth, limbless body. Its mouth is surrounded by tenacles and blades into the pharynx, a perforated, nearly cylindrical structure not unlike a gas-mantle.

The fabric of the gas-mantle is covered with cells bearing tiny vibrating hairs or cilia of the same nature as those in our air-passages, and these microscopic hairs are continually working water through the perforations in an outward direction.

The space round the gas-mantle opens into the sea by a special pore; thus there is a continual slow current of water—in at the mouth, through the slits of the gas-mantle, out by the special pore.

This apparatus is not unlike the gill-apparatus of a fish, for here also there are clefts in the side of the throat through which water passes out, and it was for a long time regarded as a similar respiratory device. But it is now known that the chief duty of the apparatus is to collect food.

As it passes through this animated sieve the water is filtered; minute organic particles are collected on strands of sticky mucus and passed down to the gullet, which opens at a place corresponding to the blind end of the gas-mantle. On this suspended matter which is collected in this way the animal subsists.

Amphioxus resembles the vertebrated animals in several important respects. In the first place, it has a tail.

In invertebrate animals the anus generally opens at the extreme hinder end of the body, and there is never the muscular backward prolongation of the body-wall, containing the end of the spinal cord, that is found in all embryo vertebrates, and in the great majority of adult members of that group.

Secondly, it has a spinal cord down its back which, like that of a vertebrate, is a hollow tube traversed by a continuous narrow canal.

Thirdly, although its digestive tube runs straight from mouth to anus, there opens out of it a blind pouch which may be the homologue of our liver.

The blood that has supplied the intestine is carried by a portal vein to this pouch and there traverses a second system of capillaries, a portal circulation, just as all vertebrata have it; and although the liver of an adult vertebrate is not a simple pouch, it nevertheless develops in the embryo from a pouch that grows out from the intestine like the liver-pouch of Amphioxus.

Amphioxus has no vertebrae, but has a stiff, elastic rod, lying among the whole length of the body, between the spinal cord and the alimentary canal.

This notochord, like our backbones, is the mechanical axis of the body on which the muscles play. It is made of a highly characteristic kind of tissue—its cells have large spaces inside them, containing water under pressure, and it is surrounded by a thin elastic membrane, secreted by the cells, so that its rigidity and elasticity are like the rigidity and elasticity of a rubber tube filled with water under pressure.

Now, in the embryos of all vertebrated animals a notochord precisely similar to the notochord of Amphioxus appears.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

MARRIAGE always overtakes a man, as Christmas does a woman, before he is ready for it, and leaves him with the breathless feeling that he has been "rushed" into it.

To keep a man interested in your kisses, always let the supply be less than the demand. Flooding the market is only deflating the value.

Once in a while, a "great lover," like Byron, writes beautifully of love, but most of the sweetest sentimental singers have been womanshy. The masculine heart blossoms with tenderness only when it is watered by tears of unsatisfied longing.

After all, a man is awfully modest when he assumes that a box of roses and a telephoned apology can take his place in a girl's life on Christmas Day.

Love's Traffic Rules: When you feel a sentimental skid threatening you, put on your emotional chains—and go slow. And never allow yourself to be blinded by any heartbreaker's headlights; no man is as dazzling as he seems while he is making love to you.

Love is what makes a man cunning in his evasions to his mother, to the boys at the office and to his clubmates—and then forget to brush the powder off his coat-lapel.

A woman regards an eligible bachelor much as she does a nice plump turkey before the holidays: she enjoys watching him strut, while he may.

Carnera, Front and Rear

Giant From Italy, Tunney Saw Him

(Copyright, 1929)

CARNERA, FRONT VIEW. HOW WOULD YOU LIKE TO FIGHT HIM?

MR. GENE TUNNEY, recently returned to America, saw this Italian giant, Primo Carnera, who was brought in to shake hands with Mr. Tunney in Paris. Mr. Tunney says he is the biggest man that he has ever seen in boxing. He is 6 feet 10 inches high, weighs 269 pounds in training, and hits hard.

Only a little while ago he was a handy man working wherever he could get work, very poor. When Tunney saw him he had on carpet slippers because no shoes are made big enough to fit him, and he couldn't afford to have them made to order. Now that he has started boxing and people go to see him, paying for the pleasure of watching him hit somebody, he can afford to buy shoes.

The Italian giant knows little about boxing, but probably will learn. In London he boxed with Young Stribling. The latter reached up, hit the huge Italian on the jaw and knocked him down. Carnera sat up, much puzzled, then realized he was angry.

He walked over to Stribling and knocked him down so thoroughly that Stribling apparently thought that he had had enough of that particular Italian. In any case, he immediately fouled Carnera so badly that the fight was instantly given to Carnera against Stribling.

Gene Tunney says the great question is as to the Italian's gameness. When he was fouled he lay on the floor, rolled, writhed and groaned in a way that game fighters of the Nordic type would have scorned.

However, Carnera is Italian and it is customary among the Latin races to let the world know how you feel.

That has not kept the Latin races from the days of the Caesars to the days of Mussolini from being included among the world's greatest fighters on the battlefield and in the arena.

Carnera will be seen in America soon, probably after he has learned something about boxing, by meeting a few men in England. He has WEIGHT, HEIGHT, REACH, STRENGTH and the capacity to become angry, considered important in boxing.

In closing, young gentlemen that admire boxing and physical strength, you are again reminded that this 269-pound giant is really a very imperfect fighting machine.

All of which will not prevent Mr. Carnera from making a million dollars or more in the United States if it turns out that he is able to fight.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

THERE are walls to keep folks out,
Walls to shut folks in,
Walls we fashion of our doubt,
Walls we build of sin.
Hate rears walls that shut away
All for which man strives,
Walls that bar the mellow day
From dim, stunted lives.
But, whene'er we may find
Barriers on our path,
Sombre walls of thoughts unkind,
Jealousy or wrath,
Comes this truth sublime:
Life has never raised one wall
Love has failed to climb!
